

LEGRAND D'ALLERAY.

D'Alleray, an aged representative of France, with his wife, was arraigned before the revolutionary tribunal, during the reign of terror. The judge hinted at an evasive reply to the charge, which the brave old man declined. "I thank you for the efforts you have made to save me; but it would be necessary to purchase our lives by a lie. My wife and myself prefer rather to die. We have grown old together without ever having lied, and we will not do so now, to save a remnant of life."

---

ARCHBISHOP LEIGHTON. A.D. 1684.

"I have a good hope and a great desire to see what they are doing on the other side; for of this world I am extremely weary."

---

W. STEPHENSON.

"Do you see that bright light? Do you see those angels?"