

the species; and, as the name has been introduced into published lists of North American Lepidoptera, I have thought it best to prepare the description here submitted, particularly as further study has convinced me that the species here named does not agree with any of the described species of this genus.

Described from 9 specimens (3 males and 6 females). Types of both sexes deposited in the U. S. National Museum.