THE INQUIRY.

Tell me, ye bustling crowd That 'round my pathway pour,
Do ye not know some good And cheap OUTFITTING STORE?
A place where we can get The value for our Cash,
And not be asked to take Some second-handed trash?
The crowd replied:—You'll find. up on the Squar',
That goal of your ambition—called the STAR.

Tell me, thou mighty swell. Where did you get your clothes?
They fit you very well,—And paid for, I suppose;
They quite a contrast show From other persons' suits,
But I suppose that trees Are known by their fruits.
The swell remarked:—The clothes you see me w'ar
I purchased at KEITH & MCGREGOR'S STAR.

And thou, old modest man. Art dressed so very neat,
That you improve the whole Appearance of the street.
Oh! need I ask you where You found that happy spot
Where such a splendid suit As you wear may be bought?
The old man sighed, and slowly said:—I sw'ar
I think all persons patronize the STAR.

Tell me, both friend and foe, Oh, tell me, one and all,
Where clothes are made to suit Spring, Summer, Winter. Fall;
Where satisfaction is At all times guaranteed,
And we may purchase all The articles we need?
A general chorus then ascended thar.
Requesting all to patronize the STAR.

REMEMBER THE PLACE.
