TO MASTERS AND SEAMEN

IN THE MERCHANT SERVICE.
NOTICE is again hereby given, that the undersigned is duly authorized to carry into effect the British Act of the 5th and 6th of William the 4th, respecting Masters and Seamen in the Merchant Service.

That, to enable the Masters to receive the necessary Documents—that they are, by the said Act, obliged to take home all balances of wages due to seamen left on shore, in hospital, or elsewhere, and incapable of duty, must be paid into his hands, and no other person can, on any account, lawfully receive the same.
Also, that all Seamen who may have been left on shore, and unable to do their duty, will be furnished with information how to act in such cases. And any master that will give a passage to England to any such seamen, will be furnished with Documents to enable them to receive the amount of their victualling account, on their arrival, from the President and Governors of the Corporation for the relief and support of sick, maimed, and disabled seamen, and the widow and children of such as shall be killed, slain or drowned in the Merchant service, and for other purposes.—1st Act of the 4th and 5th William 4th, cap. 52.
Under these circumstances, it is to be hoped few disabled seamen will remain in Canada, during the long winter, in a state of destitution.
J. LAMBLY,
Commissioner.
Quebec, July 15th, 1836.

Portry.

THE INFANT BACCHUS CARRIED BY NYMPHS.

From the Dublin University Magazine.
In the recess of an ancient wood
There was a vine, a rich grassy lawn—
The thickly-foliaged trees around it stood,
With heavy drooping boughs, as if withdrawn
By nature's hand like curtains—every fold
Of a luxuriant green, with fringe of gold
Wrought of the living sunshine; and within
The infant Bacchus—Merry maidens three
Surrounded him. One sat, so that his head
Upon her lap found a luxurious bed,
And bending over him, her hands did twine
Red roses and the tendrils of the vine
Amidst his; slow curls, and ever turned
Towards her the melting beauty of his eyes,
Within whose liquid blue there would arise
Flashes of that glad sunny mirth, that yearns
For utterance in his heart. And by his side,
Half veiled in her bright tresses floating wide,
Reclined the second. Her left hand did hold
Firmly upon the grass a cup of gold;
And from the right there flowed the purple stream
Of the pressed grapes. The third sat by his feet,
And her red lip drew music slow and sweet,
From a small flute; and that entranced boy,
Thus drinking from the mingled fount of joy,
Music, and love, and wine, turned not to see
Where, by a fountain bending mournfully,
Sate a pale maiden. We knew not her tale—
Whether that fountain wakened up some thought
Of happiness that was as bright and frail
As that of a mortal. Bacchus never sought
To know her history, and the past is dumb
Of who she was, or what she mourned; (the hour
When he should wake for lonely maid the power
Of a new love to soothe her was not come.
Perhaps that hour, when every joy was new,
He felt the glory of his being more
That when he came in god like pomp to woo
Lone Ariadne on the Cretan shore.

Miscellaneous.

Consequence of Bad Trade.—Last Monday, a shrewd citizen on being told that the Bank of England had again advanced the rate of interest, and that there were indications from other sources of a revision in trade, replied—
"Well, I was sure there was something in the wind after six an awfu' list o' marriage read o'er in the kirk yesterday—there's eye maist buclin' t'gether in difficult times, an' I daur say it's natural enough after a'."
Glasgow Constitutional.
A Hint to the Queen at Cards.—We do not know whether her Majesty ever plays at cards with one of the noblemen attached to the Court. If she does, we advise that it be for "ready money." It is not long since that this "noble" and "most honourable" person gave a cheque for £250 upon P—and Co., the bankers, to the manager of a Club in St. James, who passed it to a friend of his, and who was obliged to bring an action against the peer to recover the amount, when "the noble and most honourable" pleaded that the cheque was given for money lost at gaming, and non-suited the plaintiff. What very honourable conduct! and what a fool the manager was to take the "most honourable" cheque!—Age.
Bathing the Eyes with Cold Water.—Though the effect of this simple remedy may for a time be hardly perceptible, yet, if duly persevered in, I can vouch for its producing the happiest results. So long as there is no actual disease of the eyes, only cold water should be used; and this, applied in the gentlest manner, will soon become sufficiently tepid for all the ends of utility and comfort.—Curtis on the Preservation of Sight.
The Late Elopement in Kent.—We understand one of the Irish brigade, who recently persuaded the daughter of a city merchant resident not a hundred miles from Shooters hill, and who was considered by her fond father and family a paragon of beauty, to elope, has caught what is vulgarly termed "a Tartar," or, in other words, the "biter" has been "bit." We hear that papa will not "fork" out, and that even as the worthy chevalier himself expresses—"Devil a bit of her togs have they sent her!"—Age.
