Coaker at Herring Neck.

Special to Evening Telegram.

HERRING NECK, To-day.

"Yesterday, Mr. Coaker arrived here and was met by the Unionists with flags, guns, and although a gale of wind was blowing quite a time. Almost every man carried a gun and powder horn; it was the best reception ever tendered a public man here. A Union meeting was held at 3 p.m. to arrange about enlarging the Union Store and other matters. At 5.30 p.m. more gun-firing was indulged in. At 7.40 the President entered the hall and received a great ovation; cheer after cheer greeted him, quite a few ladies being present. The Orange Hall was crowded, and at 8 the President began his speech, speaking for 2½ hours. It was the best, largest and most orderly meeting ever held here. The speech was easily the best ever heard at Herring Neck. It captivated all present. The speaker was cheered repeatedly when speaking. All are Unionist to-day. None could withstand the eloquence and fluency of the President's remarks. Quite a few men from outlying settlements were present although the gale of wind was at its height. Men from Cobbs Arm, Pike's Arm, Too Good Arm and Merritt's Harbor attended. The meeting closed at 10.30 by singing the National Anthem and with cheers for Coaker and the Union. Another Union meeting was then held when arrangements were completed to enlarge the Union Store and take over the building now hired. An address of welcome was presented to the President and thus one of the greatest days at Herring Neck has been ended, and all went home proud of the Union and their leader. The President left for Dog Bay this morning where he will address a public meeting to-night."

MINARD'S LINIMENT CURES DISTEMPER.

The Lintrose Arrives.

After Long and Stormy Passage—Had Terrible Weather—A Magnificent Ship—Sumptuously Finished—Most Modern Equipment.

The S. S. Lintrose, Capt. Spracklin, arrived off this port last night at 11.30 and hove up outside till daylight when she berthed at the Reid Co's docks.

The ship which is the new boat for the Sydney-Port aux Basques route, had a terrible time of it coming out, and left South Shields at 6 p.m. on Tuesday, the 15th inst. From the start the ship had terrible weather with hurricanes of wind rising from S. W. to N. W. and with a sea which virtually ran mountainous high; this continued up to yesterday, and though the ship received damage she would have been disabled were it not for her solidity and staunchness and her splendid qualities as a sea boat. Neither Capt. Spracklin nor Chief Officer Taverner ever experienced such a tempestuous voyage. At 2.15 a.m. on the 17th a tremendous sea broke right over the bows and sweeping aft smashed in and completely washed away large sections of the upper and lower bridges, and it was fortunate for Mr. Taverner, who had charge, that he was not in the centre of the bridge but stood on the port side, or he must have certainly gone overboard. This same sea smashed the glass in the ladies' cabin, and such was the volume of water which poured on board that the mainhead forward was bent with the force of it and was twisted down to the "crow's nest." The chocks with the heavy lifeboats in them were also started from their position, and it took two hours to replace them. As a matter of fact the ship was sea swept all through her voyage of a fortnight and her speed was so impeded that although she can do 15½ knots under ordinary conditions, this was sometimes reduced to 2 knots, while her best day's work was 260 miles. The seas sweeping on board poured the water down into the main hatch and the maindies had to be torn off to get at the coal in the bunkers which was flooded, so that steam might be kept up on the ship. The wheel box was carried away with a sea on the 26th March, and another beat up the heavy iron gangways as if they were so much wire. The past three nights it was very cold and ice made about her decks. Yesterday morning the ship ran through some slush which was very cold and ice made about her decks. Yesterday morning the ship ran through some slush which was very cold and ice made about her decks. Yesterday morning the ship ran through some slush which was very cold and ice made about her decks.

Description of Ship.

The Chief Officer, Mr. Taverner, kindly showed a Telegram representative through the ship to-day, and it is safe to say that nothing on such a magnificent scale for a ship of her size has been built for local service. The ship has 3 decks—the boat deck on top; the shelter deck next and main deck below. On the upper or boat deck is a splendid promenade of over 100 feet in length running from the after hatch to the bridge, and on this same deck is the smoking saloon, a spacious and beautifully furnished apartment with every convenience and all that art can suggest for the comfort and pleasure of lovers of the weed.

The prevailing color in this saloon is blue, with morocco upholstery, and off this is situated the Marconi room and the bar, both these places being equipped on the most modern plans and beautifully furnished. The shelter deck below runs flush from the stern forward to the fore-castle head, and on this deck are the lockers, storerooms and other apartments, while forward is the spacious and magnificently furnished dining saloon. Right forward of this is the ladies' cabin finished in the rarest of wood, beautifully polished and set about with plate glass mirrors at intervals, richly carpeted and furnished in a most luxurious manner. The dining saloon to which we just alluded, is done mostly in mahogany with beautiful stained glass doors, mahogany sideboards, and 40 persons can dine there at once. Telephones run over the ship and are connected with the Marconi operator's, captain's, chief steward's, and chief engineer's apartments, and also with the engine room and main saloon and pantries. The pantries and kitchens are just aft of this, and in them are every modern convenience for cooks and stewards, with great ranges for cooking the ship's food. In the main saloon, which is an apartment so beautifully adorned and perfectly equipped that one cannot begin to describe it, are seventeen staterooms, containing four berths in each, and also fitted with every convenience. The toilets, and are up to date in every way, and the ship's lines are very pretty; she is considered to be a decided improvement on the Bruce. She is five feet longer than that ship and carries more beam. The ship is well ventilated and lit with electric lights, and carries a system of Morse night signals, which hold a chemical that at night time and in contact with the water will show a bright light for hours. Several English stewards and engineers came out on her. Her dimensions are: Length 255 feet, beam 37 feet, depth 25 feet. Registered tonnage 683.44 gross. H.P. 32.50; Speed 15½ knots. Her engines are triple expansion, direct acting, vertical inverted cylinders, 42 in. stroke. The ship leaves on the Sydney-Port aux Basques route, Monday.
