THURSDAY EVENING, AUGUST 1.

NORAH CUSHALEEN

OR THE HAUNTED CASTLE.

CHAPTER IV.—THE SMUGGLERS' CAVE—THE DISCOVERY.

Terry took it in his arms; it opened its large blue eyes, looked up to him, and smiled. He snatched it to his heart, kissed it, and vowed that he would be to it as a father. Then he laid it in Norah's bosom, and, finding there the breast that nourished it, it was soon happy and at rest.

Norah murmured some indistinct words as she mechanically folded her arms round it. Terry bent eagerly down to listen, but he failed to catch their import. It must have been nature half awake—the deep sleep of the senses; for a happy smile came over the mother's face, and she began to breathe with regularity, as if she had come out of the region of oblivion into the fairer region of sleep and dreams.

As they watched, the child likewise fell into childhood's sweet, peaceful slumber, and the two innocent victims of Malvina Blantyre's selfish cruelty were saved from the cruel death to which they had been doomed.

'They are safe now, the crisis is past,' whispered Hargrave.

'Amen, and amen,' responded Terry.

'What a marvellous operation of Providence this is,' observed Hargrave again, 'for us to be taken to the particular spot at the exact moment, and Norah to be saved by her own brother as he was returning from a foreign land.'

'Saved by me, yer honour?' cried Terry as he brushed away the tears.

'Sure we mustn't forget that it was the dog that did it. But where is the cruther at all, at all?'

'Dash—Dash!' called his master, and presently something dark appeared from beneath the covering of one of the couches, and Dash came leaping forward, wagging his tail.

In the fullness of his gratitude, Terry threw his arms round the dog's neck and regularly embraced him—a demonstration which Dash received with much gravity, though he did not return it.

'Och, but yer a wonderful sinisable baste,' exclaimed the impulsive Irishman, giving the huge and patient animal another hug. 'Sure and ye deserve a mighty substantial feed, and ye'll get it too afore yer half-an-hour older.'

'I think we would all be the better of a feed,' suggested Hargrave; 'but how such a thing is to be come at in this singular place, I can't imagine.'

'Then I'll be after showin' yer honour,' rejoined Terry, whose natural flow of spirits had returned. 'I said I would take you to comfortable lodgings, and I'll redeem my word.'

As he spoke, he went to a recess filled with miscellaneous articles, and brought forth ham, dried fish, and hard sea biscuit. From another and lower recess he got a kettle and cooking utensils.

The former he filled with pure spring water, which bubbled up from the floor in one corner; and having hung it above the fire, which was now sending forth a great heat, he cut several slices of ham, and put them and pieces of fish into a frying-pan, and soon a hissing noise and fragrant odour gave pleasant tokens of the coming supper.

In less than an hour the table was spread with an abundant, well-cooked meal, which, with its accessories, was as well served up as if it had been produced in a city hotel or a nobleman's hall. They were all hungry, and each did ample justice to the good cheer, and when the substantialities were disposed of, Terry brewed a bowl of first rate whiskey punch, and they became jolly over its consumption.

'Well Terry,' remarked Hargrave, as he took the full glass which the former presented to him first, 'you have more than redeemed your promise. If this is a fair specimen of Irish hospitality, I'll not regret paying a visit to the green Isle. I wish you joy on your return to your native land, and may you live a long and happy life among your relatives.'

'Bless yer honour for all these grand wishes,' returned Terry, 'if she,' he added, pointing to the couch on which Norah lay, 'if she was come round so far as to be able to speak, I'll learn whether I've come home to joy or to sorrow. Never a bit o' news have I heard of the old man or her since I tuk the say at Cork six years ago. Maybe a broken heart followed broken fortunes, and sent my father to his grave.'

TO BE CONTINUED.

THE ELECTION LAW.—Says the Globe: "We are asked from several quarters whether the assessment roll of 1866 or that of 1867 is to be used at the coming elections. The law is very clear upon the point. If the clerk of a municipality has filed the roll of 1867, one month before the issue of the writ of election, it will be used; if he has not so, that of 1866 is the legal roll. The clerk need not file the roll till the 1st of October; it is entirely at his option whether he does so or not. In some municipalities the roll has been filed, in others it has not.

On Tuesday morning about one o'clock a burglar entered the store of W. S. Robertson, grocer and commission merchant, of Sarnia, and blew open the safe and succeeded in getting off with $1,300—one hundred $4 bills of the Niagara District Bank, $300 in other notes, principally of the Royal Canadian Bank, and $600 in silver. It is supposed that the robber went across the country to Lucan, Widder or Sarnia.

Mr. John Smart, senior, of Port Darlington, an old resident, widely known and universally esteemed, was with his grand daughter, Agnes, daughter of Mr. George Smart, of Lindsay killed on the Grand Trunk Railway on Tuesday by their carriage coming in contact with a locomotive.

FARM FOR SALE.

THE subscriber offers for sale a first-class farm, being Lot No. 8, East half 3rd Con. Township of Erin, containing 100 acres, from 75 to 80 of which are cleared, and with the exception of about 10 acres, free of stumps. This farm well fenced, and in a high state of cultivation.—There is a never-failing creek and a good well and pump on the premises; also, a never-failing creek runs across the Concession about ten rods from the corner of the lot. There are two good barns—a log 30x50 and a frame 36x60—and a good log house 20x30 feet, with a back kitchen and a frame stoop, four bed rooms, &c. Also, a good young orchard of choice fruit trees, many of them bearing. This farm is about five miles from Acton Station, and about a mile and a half from the Erin gravel road. The farm will be sold on liberal terms, and a good title given. For further particulars apply personally, or by letter (post-paid) to the subscriber, on the premises.
