GEORGETTE COATS SHOW NO COLLAR

Scarf Takes Its Place, Fastening by Knotting the Ends.

By AILEEN LAMONT, Special, The Advertiser, Copyright.

New York, July 1.—Nearly any girl can stand to be called a minx if she be given a mink coat to back the name. And now is the time many are buying them, for the prices of the winter garments are materially reduced. It must be remembered, however, that a mink coat cannot be hung in the attic with impunity, and that storage charges should be counted into the original cost.

It is nothing for a boa constrictor to be twenty feet long, but it is a novelty for a feather to attain that length. None the less the latest neck ornaments of lanced, uncurled, ostrich plumes are fully that long and are worn exactly as a side show "snake" about her. They are wound about the shoulders, waist and one arm.

Collarless Coats.

For years it has been an axiom that every coat ought to have a collar. Now the latest coats of filmy georgette or crepe de chine have only a scarf. The scarf is attached at the back and the coat is fastened at the top only by knotting its ends. Glazed kid has taken a prominent place in the last week in material for footwear. Probably the modern miss buys glazed kid shoes to match the patent leather shine on their shingled head since the smooth and glossy locks guaranteed by a dozen manufacturers of hirtle ungulate is not confined at present to the sheik of Park avenue and the theatrical district. Even handbags are of shiny leather.

Jeweled Dresses.

Since fashion has turned a rather baleful glare on the overloading of the person with jewels, women who have them are loading them not on themselves, but on their gowns. The latest evening frocks of the London season have shoulder straps of real diamonds and sapphires, and one of Queen Mary's latest dresses has a train of Indian silver and brocade patterned in jewels.

HOLIDAY IS FEATURED BY SPORTS PROGRAM

Baby Show Is Attraction at Celebration Held in Chatham.

Special to The Advertiser. Chatham, July 1.—All city streets led today to the Stirling park, where hundreds attended a community day arranged by the Stirling-Imperial Athletic association. There were races of all kinds for old and young. Prizes were donated by local merchants. Two baseball games, three softball games, a baby show were features of the day's program. In the latter event there were nearly 100 entries. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Rex Bowers won in the two-year and under competition.

Dominion Day passed off quietly, no serious complaints being lodged with the city or county police departments. Although there were many sporting attractions in the city, there was the usual holiday exodus, a large number motoring to the different summer resorts in the country.
