DA GRIPPE

When bones they ache, And nerves they shake,
And bees they buzz within your head,
When bells they ring,
And friends they sing
What time salt tears bedew your bed; When pain doth rack Your brain and back, And tingle at each tinger tip;

Outreds the rose, 'Tis then you know you've got the grip When life doth seem

One big black dream, One monstrous nightmare, crushing out Each spark of hope; O when you grope In blackest night of bitter doubt,

When cares the grow So heavy, O.

To 'scape them all your fain to slip
Your cable, friend,

Earth's woes to end, Tis then you know you've got the grip!

When 'tis like ice; Then, in a trice. Your blood is boiling in your veins:

When now aglow, Your mind doth tlow, And now 'tis bound in iron chains. When, if your soul

Did pay the toll, You feel you're bound to take the trip To the "Unknown," Man, you must own You know this much-you've got the grip!
