[58]

future to prefer our own Interest to that of others; to proportion our Expences on the Continent to the immediate Expences of our own Country, and never to affift a New Ally without remembering how much we did for our Old one, and what return we have had. We fee plainly, Sir, by the Conduct of Great Britain at this Hour, that' the Ministry is not inclined to let this Prince fall for want of a due Affistance; but fure while we affift him fo materially in Europe, we are not bound to facrifice our Interests in other Parts of the World. It may be a popular Doctrine, but I hope, it is not a Doctrine that will be received.

‡ Enthufiafm, Sir, is a noble Principle of Action, but good Senfe and Knowledge only must direct the fole Businefs of a Negotiation. The Protestant

[‡] P. 40, 41. I would inculcate a Dostrine which I think will not be unpopular, and which therefore, I hope, will not be oppofed by our Ministers, that whatever Conquest we have made, and whatever Conquest we may still make upon the French, except North America, which must be kept all our own, should be looked upon as given back to France for a valuable Consideration, if it can be the Means of extricating the King of Prussia from any unforesteen Distrestes.

Caufe