A flying match was agreed to and upon a certain date the birds were thrown, but the "timer in" said it was a dead heat so the birds were thrown, but the "timer in" said it was a dead heat so the birds were thrown, but the same result. Now, this was doo much for the two miners, who agreed to get an "expert" to time the birds. So a date was chosen, and they intend making a big effort to pull out of last place. To do so they must win to-morrow's match from the Irish, and a hig battle may be locked for.

The Irish-Canadians boast of a home that can score goals faster than any other club in the league, if they are not watched closely, and any break upon the part of the Indians will be fatal to their chances of success. The Montrealers will arrive to-morrow morning, and Manager Kennedy is anxious to show the class that his aggregation possess. President Quinn has appointed Messrs.

A wise lady who keeps a fashionable boarding-house at Brighton has taken an excellent method of checking the disposition of her guests to embrace the pretty chambermaids with which the establishment abounds. A frolicsome youth received at the end of his month a bill in which these charges occurred:—

A Change of Diet.

"Any complaints, orderly?" said the commanding officer.

"None, sir," rerlied the former. "except the men would like some rhubarb."

"Ere, corporal," said the orderly, a few minutes later, to the man in charge of the commissariat. "C.O. says as 'ow wean 'ave rhubarb."

"Rhight-oh!" said the corporal, and he proceeded to write it down.

"R-u—" he spelt audibly: then he rubbed it out. "R-e-u—" he went on an hastily abandoned that. "R-h-e-u—" he wrote, in desperation.

"Ere, cash it," he said, "you 'ave cabbage!"
