some 2c per bushel higher, and domestic crop news even worse than that in circulation last week; in fact, there was hardly any news received that was not of a bullish tenor, but on the opening advance there was some short selling by local longs, which induced pit traders to take the selling side, and depressed prices during the most of the session, prices at the close showing 1½c loss. Considerable attention was accorded the fact that this is the last week in June, and July contracts will be very largely evened up, is the last week in June, and July contracts will be very largely evened up, which should result in some firegularity—possibly lower prices temporarily.

Corn and oats opened strong and higher, but, as was the case in wheat, local longs were liberal sellers, and traders bearishly inclined seized the opportunity to accelerate the decline. Thruout the session there was but little rallying power observed, and at the close prices were at the low level.

Melady & Co. had the following at the close:

Wheat—Expectations of higher prices were aroused this morning by the advance in Liverpool, but the response in our market to this influence was limited and of brief duration. Weather conditions were favorable for the crop, but rather too much rain-is falling over the harvest belt. Uncertainty as to the result of July deliveries, and the elevator complications are causing weakness. wheat, and we doubt if any material improvement will occur during the present week. The market to-day disappointed expectations of the bulls.

Corn-Market yielded with wheat, althotoables were higher and cash demand good. Weather is duite favorable, but reports fail to show the expected improvement in the outlook for the crop. Stocks are small, and July deliveries will probably not have as much effect as in wheat and oats.

Oats-Another sharp break in July weakened the whole list, altho the buying in September looked good. Red Rock, % to %; no sales.
