ELECTRICITY IN AGRICULTURE

(Toronto Globe).

The British Board of Agriculture, under the leadership of Mr. Prothero, the president of the board, who is a scientific agriculturist and only incidentally a politician, is revolutionizing agricultural methods in the United Kingdom.

The breaking up of pasture land and of vast stretches of park land left out of use by the owners of historic estates has so greatly increased the area of arable land that after the coming harvest the country will be more nearly self-supporting than it has been since the Napoleonic wars.

Great improvements are also being introduced in methods of cultivation. Two of the most important owe their efficacy to the application of electricity. It has been known for some time that the direct application of electricity to growing crops produces a remarkable increase of yield, but the expense of the application has rendered the method unprofitable.

The Journal of the Board of Agriculture now reports that a method has been devised which overcomes this objection. This method has been very successful experimentally, but has scarcely yet passed the experimental stage. It is, however, full of hope.

The other improvement is a method of treating by electricity seed before it is sown. Farmers on a large scale, who have tried it experimentally in previous seasons, are now laying down plans to treat the whole of their seed—wheat, barley, and oats. Owing to the liberality of the Ministry of Munitions, acting at the instance of the Board of Agriculture, installations at which farmers can have their seed treated by experts, have been erected at several centres, and are capable of treating some 80,000 sacks per month. The increase of yield from seed so treated, though not as great as the increase from electrification of the growing crops, is yet very great, ranging from 20 to as much
