No less than nine prisoners faced Judge Ritchie in the police court this morning, six of them being charged with drunkenness and the others with different charges. Bernard Barry, Daniel McCann, George Sullivanand Scott Fanjoy were each fined $4 or ten days in jail for drunkenness. Fanjoy was also fined $8 or two months in jail for being profance. James Boyd, Mac Tippett and Fred Rooney were each fined $8 or two months in jail for drunkenness.

The other two prisoners, Harry McDonald and George Collins, had more serious charges to answer to, and they were both fined heavily. McDonald was given in charge by Lillian Hurley for assaulting and beating her in her house in Union street, and was also charged by Mrs. Mary Hurley with assaulting and beating her in the same house. Both the complainants were on the stand, and it was also brought out in the evidence that McDonald had threatened to kill Lillian Hurley. His Honor gave the prisoner a severe reprimanding and fined him $40 or four months in jail, $20 or two months in jail for each offence.

George Collins was charged with assault-mer and at any time open connection with the wires running by the track, a pole-like instrument which immediately makes its presence known in the transmitting station. Connection may thus be opened at any place along the line, simply by the stopping of the train, and adjusting the instrument, and through a sort of "buz zer" which sounds in the ears the controlling operator may take the initiative in the conversation. It is at once apparent that this connecting of trains of all kinds in occasion.

On the first trial today the new system of dispatching resulted satisfactorily, and as time goes on, it is expected that a change to the old system of telegraph would not be desired. It was feared at first by some that the installation of the newer and more up-to-date methods would perhaps, result in the lessening the number of telegraph operators employed on the railroads, but this is not the case, as the dispatcher who attends the 'phone is r in jail, $20 or two months in jail for each offence.

George Collins was charged with assaulting Elizabeth Gallant, and Mary Ferris in the latter's house in Brunswick street on Saturday afternoon last, and also with making indecent proposals to both. The prisoner pleaded not guilty, but after the two women had given their evidence he was fined $40 or four months in jail, Collins was on the stand and denied the charges, saying that the women had asked him into their house.

The Collins was charged with assaulting the collins was charged with assaulting in the number of miles covered in this telephone dispatching service, and in some districts the system is not of recent installation, but has been in commission for some time, and given such satisfaction as warrants the extension throughout the dominion. From Montreal to Newport the system has been in use for three years, while with the exception of the Atlantic division other sections have had it for a year. Since such commendable results have been obtained

LOG DRIVING UP RIVER

If the heavy rainfall of yesterday afternoon and last night extended up river far enough, lumbermen here will receive immense benefit and millions of logs that have been hung up will get to the mills, and thus relieve the present somewhat stringent situation.

Lumbermen seen this morning had not received advices from up river sources, but they were hopeful the down-pour had been felt at the regions where most needed.
