

W. Bro. George W. Wakeford, as the Representative of the Grand Lodge of Maine.

“ David Montgomery, as the Representative of the Grand Lodge of Mississippi.

“ Alexander McKenzie, as the Representative of the Grand Lodge of New Mexico.

“ Joseph L. Dyer, as the Representative of the Grand Lodge of North Carolina.

“ Thomas Adams, as the Representative of the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.

“ William R. Ellis, as the Representative of the Grand Lodge of West Virginia.

“ A. Newton Large, as the Representative of the Grand Lodge of Wisconsin.

This Grand Lodge has now representatives to and from thirty-three Grand Lodges, an increase of nineteen in the past two years. The office of Grand Representative appears to be one rather of honor than of service, but it can be made the means of much usefulness, if the brethren holding such offices would carefully peruse the proceedings of the Grand Lodge from which they are appointed, and communicate all matters of interest to this Grand Lodge. They should also communicate to their constituents an abstract of our proceedings and other matters of masonic interest.

At the Semi-annual Communication a Committee was appointed to revise our Constitution and Bye-laws. They will lay their work before the Grand Lodge at this Annual Communication, and as this is a subject which should be very carefully dealt with, I have to ask each one of you to give it your most serious and careful attention. In our past communications we have, I fear, been too anxious to

br
ter
ge
Br
an de er
ou
to mi

fr an
Al
Ne
ly
lo

Se
H
w

yo
co st
fi
co
oi
fr
co
o
au