

Shortage of space was orientation's worst problem

By KATHY WESTMAN

This year's orientation squad consisted of 90 members. Overall Orientation seems to have been a success. Orientation Chairman Damian Bone said, "All events were packed and unfortunately we had to turn kids away from most events because there just wasn't room."

A shortage of space seems to have been this year's biggest problem. Also some of the supplies for Shinerama advertising arrived Tuesday - too late for Shinerama.

Shinerama was held on Saturday, Sept. 7 and ran for five or six hours. This year UNB brought in a total of $3900, a drop of $400 from last year's $4300. UNBSJ totalled $4600 this year, a $600 drop from last year. Bone said, "A lot of people were giving less than last year."

The Shinerama dance was packed five minutes after it opened. The group for the event was "Everyday People".

"If there had been more space," Bone said, "there could have been another 500 kids attending."

Other events for Frosh week were: a pub with Major Hooples Boarding House held at the Lord Beaverbrook Rink Tuesday. Upperclassmen and STU students were allowed in after the Frosh. Movies were shown in Tilley Hall Wednesday night and the same movies were shown Thursday night for upperclassmen, with an admission charged. The movies were Summer of '42 and a James Bond flick.

Tonight, Friday 13th, the semi-formal Superstitious Frosh Social with the Thomists will be held in the SUB ballroom.

Bone said, "I hope Frosh will come even if they don't have a date."

If you've been wondering what happened to the beanies this year well...Laine Carson said that when she was looking up things for the yearbook last year she noticed the 69-70 frosh didn't have beanies. As Bone put it, "Beanies are just too expensive now."

The medical bands for Frosh seem to have been a good idea. Carson said, "It was a lot easier to tell who were Frosh and who weren't. Last year with the beanies a lot of kids didn't wear them so we ended up asking kids if they were Frosh or not."

The medical bands couldn't be taken off and they had to be shown to get into some events. The only Frosh without the medical bands were the football players and this was for safety reasons.

The nineteen frosh queen candidates nominated by proctors or squad members were interviewed by the Orientation Executive this past Monday. Seven finalists were chosen. According to Bone it was a hard decision based on personality. The interviewing took place in a SUB lounge and was like an informal get-together. The candidates were not questioned by the executive as such but everyone just chatted. Bone said, "We were trying to get away from the meat show part of it."

"We were going to vote for the Frosh Queen but we figured it was fairer to the girls this way. The other way it was how many friends you could get to the event to vote for you," Bone said.

The seven remaining candidates were introduced at the Get Acquainted Dance this past Tuesday.

On Wednesday the orientation executive met with the candidates to make a final decision on a Frosh Queen. The Queen will be named on Friday at the Superstitious Social. She will be crowned by last year's Frosh Queen Trish Gowdy.

Remember even if you don't have a date and you're a Frosh we want to see you at the Superstitious Social tonight.

Tongue stuck kid? Orientation activities conclude today. One of the changes this year was the use of hospital bands as frosh identifications instead of the traditional red and black beanie.

He's a liaison for students

By RICK BASTON

G. Barry Thompson, who assumed the position of Dean of Students on Sept. 1, said his main reason for applying for the position was a desire to expand his perspective on life.

He said that as a university expands and grows a person can achieve a good deal of success, but often only at the expense of achieving a narrow view of people. He felt the job as dean of students would give him an opportunity to avoid this.

Thompson said there were several ways to view the Dean of Students job. The most basic of these was that of a person who provides a strong liaison between the administration and faculty, and the students.

The Dean should be the humanizing element for the students the interests of the students to the administration and vice-versa.

The Dean should be able to develop programs and policies which are in tune with the educational objectives of the university.

The Dean of Students, Thompson explained, reports directly to the president of the university and works in consultation with the vice president's academic and administration. The Dean of Students provides the following things for the students:

1. Administration of the Dean of Women.
2. Dean and Provost of the Men's Residence.
3. Director of Counselling for students.
4. Off-Campus accommodations. This office sets the standards for students living off campus.
5. Undergraduate Awards office. This office takes care of entrance scholarships, bursaries and loans.
6. Campus Health Services.
7. Overseas Students Advisor.
8. High school relation officer.
9. A number of senate committees.

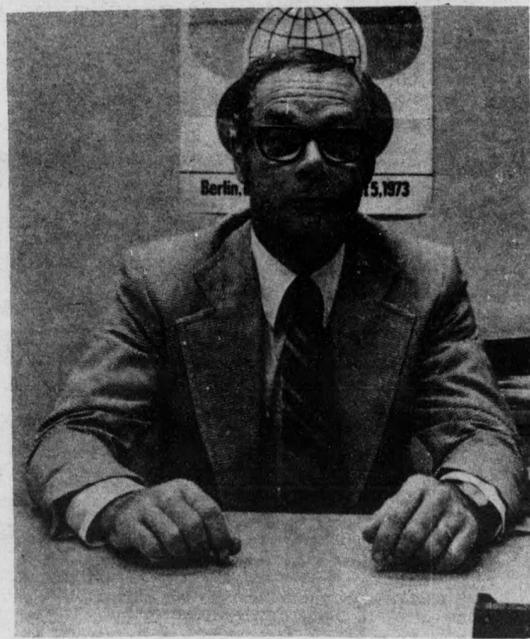

Thompson is a native of the small mining community of Britannia Beach, B.C. He received his formal education at the University of British Columbia. Here he began as an engineering student but soon switched to Physical Education.

He worked with the Y.M.C.A. in Vancouver before he went on to Springfield University for his Master's degree in Physical Education. He then worked for the 'Y' in Hamilton before accepting, in 1955, a position with McGill University in Montreal. There he was the coach of the swimming and the water polo teams. He also helped to organize a physical education program for the MacDonald Protestant School Board.

In 1959 Professor Thompson received an appointment to the faculty at UNB. From 1963 to 1966 he was co-researcher and research committee chairman for UNB's myo-electrical controls research committee and in 1966 became research associate with the Bio-Engineering Institute. In 1973 he became chairman of the division of physical education of the faculty of education.

Professor Thompson's term is for three years.
