

Tide Turns for CUS

Important Victory at Simon Fraser

BURNABY (CUP) — The Canadian Union of Students won an important victory Tuesday (Nov. 5) when the students of Simon Fraser University voted 1123-685 to stay in the union.

The policies of Martin Loney, CUS president-elect and past president of Simon Fraser University student council, and his activist executive of this summer, seemed doomed to failure following the fall election of a moderate slate to the SFU council.

Loney was elated by the results and said: "This should turn the tide for CUS". He also claimed, as a result of his recent tour of the west, "it's very likely the University of Alberta will vote to join CUS by the end of the year."

Because of Loney's position with CUS, all eyes turned to SFU to see if students there had placed the moderates in office as a reaction to student power at that campus or as the prelude to rejecting CUS policy and membership.

Rob Walsh, council president, was "disappointed" with the results of the vote. He and his moderate council voted 7-3 last week to pull out of CUS because it was a waste of money and didn't represent the majority of students in Canada. But their constituents didn't agree.

Jim Harding, former activist vice-president, said:

Immigrants cause demonstrations

TORONTO (CUP)—City Police chief James Mackay slammed American immigrants for leading recent Toronto area demonstrations.

He said protests and demonstrations in Toronto had increased in frequency coincident with the influx of American immigrants (presumably draft resisters).

"Moderates need the mass media to scare new students. When they haven't got it, students can translate their self interests into votes."

Percy Smith, executive secretary of the Canadian Association of University Teachers, gave strong support to the union in his address to the SFU student council last week. He said: "I view the partial disintegration of CUS as nothing short of disaster."

"They are demonstrating against what I don't know . . . for the sake of demonstrating," said Mackay.

He accused dissenters of trying to "create problems . . . to disturb the police to get some reaction."

And, he claimed, they were disrupting in Toronto where all citizens are "in favor of law and order."

Ron Harris spent last summer fishing for water.

Mad? Not really; Ron is a marine biologist with the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources. The water he fished for and the sediments in it contained vital information about depths, tides, navigational hazards and the nature of the seabed. After three months at sea, Ron produced a report that will make our coastal waters safer for navigation and help in the development of harbour facilities.

Ron Harris is one of the new breed of people in public service . . . young, college educated, ambitious and dedicated. In Government service he has found a rewarding and responsible future in the mainstream of Canadian development. The Public Service of Canada has career opportunities for young men and women like Ron. If you'd like to know about them, write to:
