Professor Langley Thinks It Is-His Reasons Therefor-Some Delicate Measurements of Radiant.

Measurements of Radiant.

That the total amount of heat in the sun tends to be constantly lessened by radiation is believed by all astronomers. That its temperature remains practically the same from age to age almost equally certain. What it is that restores or maintains this temperature is perhaps the fundamental problem of selar physics. Whatever its solution may be, exact measurements of the sun's radiation show that this fluctuates considerably, and it is probable that these changes have an influence on the earth's weather. The mest delicate measurements of radiant heat are those made with Professor Langley's bolometer, an instrument now so perfected that it will indicate the heat given out by a human face the heat given out by a human face che-third of a mile distant. The results of some measurements of solar radiation made by Langley with this device are thus stated by C. W. Saleeby in the Academy and Literature, London, Says this writer:

"He (Langley) believes that at the end of March, 1903, contemporaneous ly with a marked increase in sun spots, something happened in the sun that caused a rapid fall in the solar radiation, which subsequently has continued to be about 19 per cent. less than before. What the cause of this fall may tion, which subsequently has continued to be about 19 per cent. less than before. What the cause of this fall may have been we cannot conjecture, but it is interesting to inquire what consequences it had for the earth. According te Professor Langley, such a change in the sun would reduce the temperature of the earth's surface by something less than 7.5 degrees C.—13.5 degrees F. Now, when attention is directed to the exact observations made at eighty-nine stations in the north temperate zone and when these are compared with the results of many previous years it is found that a definite fall of more than 2 degrees did actually occur, nor is it possible to conactually eccur, nor is it possible to con-ceive 'what influence, not solar, could have preduced this rapid and simul-taneous reduction of temperatures over the whole north temperate zone and continued operative for so long a per-iod.' While we remain ignorant of the cause of this solar change we can-not make any predictions as to the not make any predictions as to its persistence or possible accentuation All we can conclude is that our tenure Burdock Blood Bitters of this 'lukewarm bullet' is perhaps not so certain as some of us have thought."

BRITISH SUBMARINES

They Have Made an Unfortunate Re oord In the Past Year.

The British navy has recently had some discouraging experiences with submarine vessels. In England two serious accidents have occurred in a year's time in the operation of submarines. Recently as the submarine

A5 was preparing to leave Queenstown with the view of demonstrating before some military officers its facility in diving an explosion occurred. Three of the officers and three of the crew of the vessel lost ther lives. A party from H. M. S. Hazard went to the aid of the A and as they arrived a second from H. M. S. Hazzard went to the aid of the A6, and as they arrived a second explosion occurred, resulting the in-jury of four of the rescuing party. Less than a year before this acci-dent sleven lives were lost on the Brit-ish submarine A1, which was run down and sunk during mandeuvres of the and sunk during maneuvers of the fleet off the Isle of Wight. It was awaiting the approach of a battleship when struck by a merchant vessel.

The A5 was the last of a series of five submarines designed for the British Admiralty in 1901.

How to Save Anxiety.

The legion of the lost and unidentified might be reduced and much anxiety saved to puzzled friends by a simple device within the control of every one. All persons after they reach a responsible age carry about a purse or pocketbook or if not can have about their clothes a strong envelope bearing name and address. Inside the purse or envelope should be a full memorandum of identity and the names and addresses of friends. This identity tag should be kept fresh and up to date, with changes of address, whether temporary or permanent, noted whenever change is made.

The Bravest Are the Tenderest.

It looked as though Nogi had an easy job at Port Arthur, simply cleaning up what the navy left behind, and the world turned to more spectacular figures like Toge and Kuroki, while the gray-haired veteran drilled away at the "Impregnable fortress." But when Nogi and his men reached the banks of the Sha, crying, "Make way for us; we're from Port Arthur!" the deadlick between Kuropatkin and Oyama was broken. It is hard hitting that counts in war.

When a woman suffers from femals weakness and irregularity or other forms of womanly disease, the effect is certain to be marked in her nervous system, the general effect being, as in Mrs. Woodin's case, "nerve as headaches, restlessness at night" and a run-down condition. It is simply common sense then which says if you cure the female weakness, irregularity, etc., you will cure the mervousness, sleeplessness and other consequences of womanly disease.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription cures the womanly diseases which undermine the general health. It establishes regularity, dries enfeebling drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness. It cures headache, nervousness, sleeplessness, etc., by curing the womanly diseases which cause these silments.

AN UNSOLVED PROBLEM

ROYAL COMMISSION'S REPORT ON SCOTTISH CHURCH SITUATION.

No Satisfactory Compromise To the Anomalous State of Affairs Begun by Lords' Decision—What the Com-mission Recommends — Another Commission Needed-4Keep the Door Open Till the Last Moment."

Of historical importance is the docuent in which the Royal Commission reports on the church situation in Scotand. This commission, it will be remembered, was appointed last December as a result of the House of Lords' decision, which declared the Free Church of Scotland, a mere handful of scattered congregations, the legal owner of all the fine buildings, churches and great endowments of the United Free Church. The case had been pend-ing for years, and the decision came as a bolt from the blue. At once there ensued at situation which has been a ensued at situation which has been a reproach to Christianity. From the Highland fastnesses fanatical mem-bers of the Free Church descended to the populous cities, and attempted to confiscate the property of the United Free congregations, Churches were locked up, schools closed, ministers evicted from manses. There were disevicted from manses. There were dis-graceful scenes in many pulpits, where rival ministers contended for the at-tention of the scandalized congrega-tion. The utmost bitterness was mani-fested, and the religious life of the whole country staggered beneath a blow which almost paralyzed it for the time being. the time being. ...
No Satisfactory Compromise.

It was to relieve such a state of af-fairs that a Royal Commission was apfairs that a Royal Commission was appointed. The province of this tribunal was to consider not the legal aspects of the case (the Lords' decision is final), but it equity. It was instructed to examine witnesses and documents, and then recommend what steps should be taken to solve the problem. This has been done, but it does not appear that the contending parties are very well pleased with the result. Feeling that the contending parties are very well pleased with the result. Feeling has been too intense to leave room for a satisfactory compromise; and it is significant of the passions which have been provoked that the commission at no place suggests that the churches at once end the difficulty by uniting. To a layman this seems the obvious remedy, and we have not the slightest doubt that Solomon, had he been trying the case, would have thus decreed. doubt that Solomon, had he been trying the case, would have thus decreed.
What trivial form divides the two branches we are not competent to say, but that it is merely a form and not a substance may be safely asserted. It is a disgrace to the cause which each church professes to serve that either would as soon think of leaguing with would as soon think of leaguing with the national church of China as with

What the Commission Recommends. What the Commission Recommends. Probably the most important part of the report is that in which the following passage occurs: "We are forced to the conclusion that the Free Church, from the paucity of its numbers and the poverty of its resources, is incapable of carrying on the religious work of the church which it represents, and therefore of putting to their proper purpose the enormous endowments with which it claims to be entrusted. But, on the other hand, it would be unjust that these endowments, or the greater part of them, should be handed over absolutely and without condition to the United Free Church. We are estisfied that as far as its material and normal resources are concerned actisfied that as far as its material and normal resources are concerned this church can perform efficiently the trust purposes which cannot be performed by its rival. Nor do we think that the judgment which must be received with all submission presents any insuperable obstacle to an equitable adjustment which we think expedient in the interests of religion and of the people of Scotland as well of the rival churches."

Another Commission Needed.

Another Commission Needed. This unmistakably points to so middle ground which has not yet be occupied. The report proceeds to develop the idea in the following sentences: "It appears to us that a controversy like this must become more and more embittered as it goes on, and cannot but be ruinous to the religious interests which both churches exist to promote: and that these injurious consequences can only be prevented by the interposition of an authority or commission which has y wer not only to investigate thoroughly but to decide effectively where an immediate decision is reasonable and proper. To prevent delays as well as to put a stop to the multiplied and interminable litigations which are threatened, and have, in fact, been already set on foot, we fecommend that the whole funds and property should, in the meantime, be vested in the proposed commission. * * The commission should be vested with administrative, as well as executive powers, so that the property might be held and administered in accordance with the trusts affecting it, and the use of buildings be allowed to either or both of the churches on lease or otherwise."

To Held the Door Open. occupied. The report proceeds to de-velop the idea in the following sen-either or both of the churches on lease or otherwise."

To Hqld the Door Open.

An Act of Parliament will be necessary to constitute the commission or suthority mentioned by the Royal Commission, and thus we may summarize the report; an Act of Parliament to appoint a commission which shall administer the funds of both churches until such time as the warring congregations come to some satisfactory agreement. It is not possible for Parliament to make them agree. The horse can be led to the water. If he does not choose to drink, one can only lead out a thirster horse. It is evident that while the Free Church will not be permitted to possess the property to which the House of Lords has given it a legal title, it will yet benefit exceedingly by whatever arrangement is made by the second commission, that is if this body is to be guided along general dires by the present report. The principle of compensation is laid down firmly. While the Free Church is "the dog in the manger" it cannot be rudely thrown out. The United Free Church must entice it away from the hay with a bone. So the matter rests, awaiting the Act of Farliament which shall in the words of the report, "Keep the door open till the last mostnes."

THE SLOVENLY GIRL

Qive Her Bainty Work to De, and IS May Cure Her.

One of the best ways of developing daintiness and dainty tastes in a gir is to give her dainty work to do. Give the girl who is careless about her room (and especially of the order of her bureau drawers) material as fine as you can get it for a couple of corset covers or a chemise with fine, dainty lace and parrow ribbon to finish it with. Get her interested in making these things; encourage her to go a step further-to make the rest of a set to match. By the time she has made a piece or two and her friends have begun to exclaim over it her ambition will be fired to go on making-and having-more of these bits of daintiness. In the meantime, as the piles grow she unconsciously begins straightening out her bureau. If she is to be constantly pulling out the drawer where her handiwork is kept she naturally begins to straighten it out, arranging everything in neat piles, so that they may be displayed to advantage. When she straightens out one drawer she-still unconsciously-begins to notice that the others are not in order and gradually her noticing include the whole room, until by the time her drawer is full of dainty made under-clothes she has acquired orderly habits in spite of herself.

PRETTY LIGHT SHADES.

One That Would De Fer Either Gas

One of the prettiest shades for an electric bulb is a large iris or orchid blossem. Stretch a pattern of the leaf frem a flower or trace and enlarge from a book illustration. Then fold crape paper and cut so as to make five or six petals. Each petal is lightly caught to a wire that runs up the center of a petal like the midrib of a leaf. This flower can be bent to entirely cover the light or left partly open.

A shade that would do nicely for either gas or electricity is made en a wire frame in petal shaped segments that grow narrow at the top. For gas they should not be decreased in size too much, for the opening at the top has to be large enough to fit ever as ordinary glass shade or a burner shade. On these petals the silk is plaited dewn tightly. Three rows of fancy millinery braid of the same color edge each petal. Where the petals join the border stands up in a ridge. There is, a ruche of the braid around the top.—New York Telegram.
