

EXTREMES.

A Word of Friendly Caution Against Going Too Far Either Way.

A great many people are fond of over-doing things. They carry practices and ideas to extremes, and indulge in the use of superlatives. Unqualified praise is seldom called for, neither is unqualified condemnation desirable, for the great poet found there was "good in everything." The general use of extremes is apt to arouse suspicion as to sincerity, and justly so. Take, for example, the use of mourning paper. Some people adopt a paper bordered by a black band fully half an inch in width. To say nothing about good taste, which may not be considered under the circumstances, the use of such paper is entirely too conspicuous. It obtrudes your grief upon everybody, and makes a display of it. The matter is wholly personal; it is not necessary to proclaim it to the world.

In the wearing of rings and jewellery, a lavishness of display is often noticeable. This also is bad form, being a parade of mere personal wealth. Rings and jewels are all right if worn in moderation, but true refinement never indulges in excesses of dress or ornamentation. It is this over-doing of things that leads to difficulties, even as too much study may weaken your eyes or destroy your health, thus preventing for a time at least further acquirement of knowledge. In speech, also, superlatives are too often used, and they serve to awaken distrust. Absolute perfection is indeed rare, and exaggeration plays a great part in modern life. We think too much of our own importance, or talk too much of ourselves. We dwell too much upon family or society, and lead a fictitious value to absolutely empty things. The use of superlative words often tends to destroy the impression that we wish to convey, simply because we overdo things. A light curb, a little thought regarding things of this life, seems to accomplish the end much better than going to any extreme, however strongly you may feel.—Harper's Bazar.

Dunning Letters That Came.

The charming blonde who presides at the registered letter window of the postoffice threw up her dainty hands with surprise a few days ago when a gentleman walked up to the window and, uttering a big grip, dumped its contents before her. There were 470 letters to be registered. Such a task had never before fallen to her lot. Her appeal for help brought the chief of the division, who provided help in the shape of three assistants for her, and the pile was soon disposed of. The man stood by until the receipts were given him.

"The fact is," he explained, "I am secretary of a fashionable club, and it's the most difficult matter in the world to make them pay up. I send hundreds of bills, and when I speak to members about it it's always the same story, 'I never got the bill, old fel; certainly I'll pay up. Just send me a bill and I'll see that you get it.' There are 470 delinquents in the club, and I'll be sure they all get their bills this quarter."

The responses have already begun to come in in a way that foretells the entire success of the scheme.—Philadelphia Record.

Had a Familiar Sound.

"What is the name of the young man that's coming to see Claribel?" asked Old Spudd, looking up from the "Stocks and Bonds" column of his newspaper. "I think I've heard it, but I have forgotten it." "It is one you certainly ought to remember easily enough," replied Mrs. Spudd. "His name is Oliver Cromwell." "My memory, madam," said Old Spudd, looking fixedly at her over his glasses, "is as good as yours. Cromwell is the name of that merchant down in Hamilton that claimed I cheated him out of $37.40 in 1873 on a consignment of eggs. You can't fool me on names!"

One Little Point.

The professor had talked to the class an hour and a half on the question of the tariff.

"There is one little point still unsettled in my mind, professor," said one of the pupils, a thoughtful young man whose intelligent face and close attention had greatly pleased the instructor. "It is this: Who finally pays the tariff on imported goods—the foreign manufacturer, the importer, or the consumer?"

The professor sat down profoundly discouraged. That was the precise point he had been trying to explain.

Odds and Ends.

Many watches make five beats per second, 300 each minute, 18,000 every hour, or 432,000 per day.

Patsy Sears, of Howard County, Indiana, aged 108 years, has been a church member a hundred years.

The average mortality of unmarried men between the ages of twenty and twenty-five is 1,174 in every 100,000, while that of married men is only 597.

Hats, Boys!

Raise your hat, boys, when you meet a girl or woman or elderly woman that you know, be your acquaintance with them ever so slight.

Take off your hats, boys, whenever you enter a house, be it the home of poverty or wealth. For thus will you prove yourselves to be possessed of the spirit that distinguishes the true gentleman.

A Unique Order.

A bureau of press clippings in London has received the royal "command" to furnish twenty distinct sets of newspaper cuttings from every periodical in the world, so far as obtainable, referring to the death of Prince Albert Victor. The sets are to be pasted each in a separate album.

Why?

"Riches have wings!" At least, so people say; And yet, why is it that They never fly our way?

Stopping a Cough.

It is said that coughing can go stopped by pressing on the nerves of the lip in the neighborhood of the nose. A pressure there may prevent a cough when it is beginning.

Ineligible.

Tillinghast—I think I can get you a situation as a government chemist. Winebiddle—Why, I never analyzed any baking powder in my life.
