SONG OF THE SWAN.

A Vocal Dirge About Which Poets and Naturalists Disagree.

There is an air of legendary mystery about the swan. Some swans are mute, but most have sonorous voices of surprising power and reach. Poetic tradition declares that the swan sings in dying, and so we have the familiar phrase to indicate the last effort of a poet—"swan song." Othello exclaims,
"I will play the swan and die in music." And Portia says in "The Mer-chant of Venice," "He makes a swanlike end, fading in music."

A hundred other poets have used similar expressions, and yet naturalists declare that the swan does not make any music in dying, though it may make a noise. And these same naturalists aver that the great vocal powers of swans are due to a special sounding apparatus formed by "the coiling of the long trachea (windpipe) within the sternum" (breast bone). The crane, whose trumpet call, when a flock is setting off for a long, high flight, can be heard from above the clouds after the birds are out of sight, is furnished with a similar vocal in-

The swan is famous for its longevity. It is said to live a hundred years, and there is at least one recorded instance of a bird in captivity living seventy years. It is longer lived than the raven.-Garrett P. Serviss in

A Curious Trail. All sorts of devices have been used to mark a line of march. A unique method of "blazing the trail" is still to be seen in Africa. Arthur J. Hayes mentions the subject in his "Source of the Blue Nile."

In 1889, after a flerce battle with the Abyssinians, the dervishes pursued their foes as far as the lake district. The mahdi's men had small knowledge of geography and little topographical intelligence. So the advance party, in order to mark the route for those who came after and also to guide the force on their return journey, twisted the saplings along the way into living knots. The war ended, but the tied up trees grew and flourished, but un couthly twisted and distorted, and are now the only reminders of that uprising of the dervishes.

The Moth and the Flame. The moth plunges headlong into the flames because of the way its body is constructed. There are two symmetrical points, exactly alike chemically, on the moth's hody namely, its eyes. If the rays of light modify the chemical condition of one side more than the other, then the moth's power of movement is affected. There is a stronger muscular tension on one side than on the other, and the moth is forced to move toward the source of light. If, however, one of the eyes is removed the chemical symmetry is destroyed, and instead of plunging into the flame it moves about in a circle.

Sergeant Well's rather humorous and altogether interesting account of his experiences at the front and in Germany as a prisoner of war, was one of the features that made the patriotic concert at Plum Hollow on Friday night an undoubted succes. The concert was under the auspices of the Red Cross Society, of which there is a branch in Plum Hollow. The ladies who engineered the event were forturate in securing W A. Lewis, Mayor Donaldson and Judge McDonald of Brockville, as well as four returned soldiers. A supper was served, and a load of Athenians who attended, were very enthusiastic in their praise of the entire affair.

Sergeant Wells enlisted at Vanconver, B.C, and went to France with The other new Senator from Ontario the First Contingent, He lost an arm will be, it is understoot, Mr. John and was for some time a prisoner in Milne, of Hamilton. These two apto peelings and bran he existed and gained freedom by his own ingenuity. While showing some of his comrad s in misery how a demented soldier had acted, he conceived the idea of turning the circumstance to his own advantage. Several German officers saw him giv ing the performance, i.e., riding around on an imaginary horse, and tapped their foreheads significantly. He immediately became "insane," and for a month, he said, he rode that poor horse daily around the enclosure. He was member of the Prince Edward Island eventually freed as a result of this

The sergeant told of a companion who developed a bent arm that refused to yield to the treatment of the German medical men who tried to straight. en it. On reaching the railway station where they were to be freed, this soldier, as soon as he touched neutral ground, straightened his arm and waved it in derision at his erstwhile captors. As they were only a few feet away on the other side of the boundary line, they were particulary galled by this evidence of British acumen and strategy.

Sergeant Wells spoke at a recruiting meeting in Loew's Theatre, Toronto, on Sunday. He is on his way back to British Columbia.
