Choosing Shoes.

The selection of shoes requires as much care as the selection of your hat. Remember that however good and well-made a boot is, if it is too short or too narrow it is certain to bulge at the side and wear into the ugly shape we are familiar with.

Never think that your feet will grow larger from wearing proper shoes. Finishing and distorting causes them to grow not only large, but unsightly, while the proper use of all the muscles makes them compact and attractive.

The girl who goes shopping for foot-gear should remember that shoes and slippers must be at least an half an inch longer than the foot. When you walk the foot is sure to work down into the toe of the boot, and if it is too short, the resistance thus caused bends the whole foot out of shape.

Any foot looks better in a long shoe, because it keeps its shape longer and makes the foot look narrower than it really is.

When you contemplate buying a new pair of shoes or slippers, postpone your shopping trip until late in the afternoon. There is the best of reasons for this time, as it is then that the feet are largest. If you would adopt this suggestion of late buying you would be sure to secure shoes that fit the foot properly.

Girls who are desirous of having their feet look smaller should wear gait shoes that contrast with the gown. The woman in tan shoes and violet dress makes a big mistake, as her feet look up big and ugly. The same is true of black shoes when the gown is light.

The feet need rest, and a very good way to rest them is to choose for your regular foot-gear the same style of sandals that they children wear. You cannot carry this far outside of the limits of your private apartment, but a momentary release from smart shoes and hosiery is a great relief to tired feet.

Let me urge all my readers to form the habit of bathing the feet once or twice daily. This does not mean to soak your feet in warm water for 10 or 15 minutes. Not in a thousand years!

A chiropodist told me, not long since, that the women who habitually bathe their feet in hot water are his best customers.

What I want you to do is to wash the feet rapidly and rub them dry with a coarse, dry towel. This daily habit will keep them immaculately clean and also lessens their tendency to enlarge as you grow older.

Mothers Need Constant Strength.

THE BEST FOR THE GROWING FAMILY, AND THE MOST HOLD CARES.

When there is a growing family, a serious matter. Many mothers who arise on the go from morning to night, work, apparently, is never done, heroically try to disguise their sufferings, and keep an appearance of cheerfulness before their family. Only themselves know how they are distressed by headaches and backaches, daggling down pains and nervous weakness; how their nights are often sleepless, and they arise to a new day's work tired, depressed and unrefreshed. Such mothers should know that these sufferings are usually due to a lack of good nourishing blood.

They should know that the things above all others they need to give them new health and strength is rich, red blood, and that among all medicines there is none can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for their blood-making health restoring qualities. Every suffering woman, every woman with a home and family to care for should give these pills a fair trial, for they will keep her in health and strength, and make her work easy. Here is strong proof that these Pills do what is claimed for them. Mrs. Henry Thomas, Dryden, Ont., says: "When my second child was born I was so weak and run down that I could scarcely walk across a room. My baby was small and weak also, and I cried and worried night and day until I discovered that the child was suffering, as my nurse had turned almost to water. My husband got me a supply of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I began taking them. The first beneficial effects were noticed in that my child began to thrive, as my nurse began to improve, and baby slept better and naturally. It was not long before I began to feel the improvement myself, and I daily gained new strength, and baby was growing very well and fat. I continued using the Pills while I was nursing him and found myself with all the vigor of good health, and able to easily do my household work, which had been so great a drag on me before. I am now never without Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in the house, and take an occasional dose when I feel tired. I can strongly recommend these Pills to all nursing women, especially if weak or run-down."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Nova Scotia Awakening.
Slowly but certainly Nova Scotia is awakening. It is a slow process, very slow, but eventually the movement will be accomplished. The awakening is general, when it fully comes it will be happening, says the Dartmouth Patriot, Nova Scotia, has the brains and the energy, and all the attributes of continued success, but they have had no faith in their own land and their own chances. That is gradually wearing off. There are many signs that give evidence the change is in progress. For one thing, farm values are beginning to appreciate and the stronger tone is seen in nearly every county.

A prominent business man born in Cumberland county, who was home this summer for the first time in several years, remarked that he noticed a entirely new note in the tone of the people of the province he met. He observed: He felt certain the clock has struck the midnight hour and that dawn is approaching.

Thousands who have gone west will be coming back again with money, new ideas and that western spirit which cannot be stayed, the thing which is so attractive to our young men. It is this factor, more than any other which draws them west. The adventurous blood of their Norse forefathers is in their veins and they cannot and will not live in a country affected by dry rot. Who can blame them?

But they will come back because the country is far more attractive to people who have some ideas beyond the old sordid dollar. This is a land for homes, it is a land of beauty of lake and stream and iron bound, sea-girt shores. Here the perfume of the single blossom mingles with the fragrance of the ocean air. It is fitly described by Longfellow. It appeals to all its sons. They love the old land and in the near future you will see them trooping back with gold lined pockets. They will still adventure and they will never get back to the bus days life of the old times.

Misard's Liniment Lumberman's friend.

Evening Chit-Chat.

A young friend of mine has recently decided to have about half as many clothes as she now has.

No, she has never been a Flora McFlimsy. Nor is she doing this because she wants to give up the vanities of the world. She has simply come to the conclusion that she will get more out of her clothes if she concentrates.

This is the way she puts it: I have always had a lot of clothes, some of them very expensive, and not more than I needed. Now I don't really need so many and I know I'd enjoy them more if I had fewer and put more thought and money into each dress. Last year I had seven or eight dresses for the summer, and there were only three I really liked, and I wore them practically all the time. Next year I am not going to have more than three or four, but they are all going to be just right. Of course, I'll have to wear them over and over again, but I know I will be better off.

Don't you think this young person has come to a wise decision? I do.

Just about three out of every four women have too many clothes. And by too many clothes I mean just the condition this girl describes—they have more clothes than they can have and have them right.

One of the best dressed women I know among the women of moderate incomes has attained this desirable distinction by concentrating in this way. She isn't one of the women whose ambition is to appear in a different gown at every function. On the contrary she has very few clothes but what she has are always perfect.

I might have twice as many gowns," she said to me "once, if I would be content with what most women in my circumstances are satisfied with. But the way I've thought it out is this—I believe that any one would rather see me again and again in a thoroughly becoming and attractive gown than to see me in two or three different dresses that weren't any of them particularly attractive. Of course, I'd rather have a lot of lovely gowns, but since with my income, that isn't possible, I'd rather have a few distinctive things than a lot of nondescript ones."

Now every woman of average income has this choice between quantity and quality to make.

We all want both, but we can't have them, we must make up our minds which is better.

Which have you chosen?

When Railroads Recede.

The manager of the Canada Atlantic was ambitious, says Edward Hynes, writing in the Canadian Magazine on E. J. Chamberlain, the new President of the G. T. R. When he had succeeded in putting his track in good shape, he went into the market to secure a couple of "roasters." He would build, he said, a pair of black flyers—that would fit over his 120 miles in 120 minutes. When he placed the contract for these two locomotives the main specification was that they should make seventy miles an hour with a full train. In a little while the new engines were delivered at Ottawa and tried out. They delivered the goods. They actually lasted along the line at a mile a minute, and to test them, they were speeded up to eighty miles an hour. The big competitor, with its splendid track and rolling stock, was amazed at the speed of the little line. Presently the two roads—three, in fact, because the Grand Trunk was made a part of the route—got together and slackened the maddening speed. A few years later the little line was absorbed by the Grand Trunk System.

REGAL FLOUR

Habits We Learn from Animals.

When Mr. Balfour, speaking recently at the Eugenes Congress, declared that man is still a wild animal, he made a statement backed by ample scientific proof.

AFRAID OF THE DARK.
Are you afraid of the dark? Most children are, and many grown up. Even the bravest of men, in a house of which he knows every square foot, feels more at his ease when the lights are up than when he is in the dark.

The reason, physiologists say, is that darkness always spelt danger to our savage ancestors. When man was all but a wild beast, living in the open amongst the other animals, his ingenuity made him their equal in the daytime. But in the night he was helpless against a crouching foe, but dark eyes often meant danger. And in spite of our civilization, this instinctive hatred of darkness still survives though in a weakened form.

LOOKING BACK ON A LONELY ROAD.
Few people are so strong minded that they have never when walking along a lonely road particularly when lined with trees, looked back. There is an instinctive feeling that a prowling enemy may be lurking behind. The backward look is not based on reasons at all. It is an instinct burnt so deeply into the minds of our primitive ancestors that even now we cannot forget it entirely.

Have you ever, when suddenly catching sight of an acquaintance in the street felt an impulse to withdraw your eyes and pretend you did not see him? That impulse comes only occasionally, and is usually mastered in a fraction of a second. But it is a relic of the old animal inability to meet a direct gaze. All animals have it. Stare your dog in the eyes and see how he looks away.

WE WON'T SIT ON A WARM SEAT.
Many people feel a slight repugnance when sitting down on a seat, say in a tramcar, on finding that it still warm from the last occupant.

Our savage ancestors knew that to find a patch of ground warm with the heat of another animal's body meant that the other animal was close at hand, and scented danger. And even in the twentieth century we can't quite forget.

WHEN DANGER IS NEAR.
People have often been known to faint from fright, others are too frightened to run away from danger and stand still. Both facts exactly correspond, psychologists say, to the trick that many have of 'staring dead' when in the presence of an animal more powerful. To move meant to attract and invite death. So only those animals in whom the instinct to stay motionless was strong survived. And this ancient instinct often shows itself still.

SIGNS OF YOUR SLEEP.
When you wake up suddenly with a start, dreaming that you have fallen from a height, you have, some sleepers say, gone back in your sleep to the tree-top age of human history.

HAVE YOU A KINK IN YOUR HAIR?
Certain little things about the body are relics from ages long before the dawn of even the most primitive form of civilization. If you feel the rim of your ear, on top you will probably find a little kink just at the curve.

Had Bad Sore Four Years.
ZAM-BUK HAS HEALED IT!
Mrs. Wilson, 110 Wickson Ave., Toronto, says: "About four years ago a sore spot appeared on the right side of my face. This spot increased in size until it became about half an inch in diameter and very painful. I went to a doctor, but the ointment he gave me did not have any good effect. The sore continued to discharge freely, and was most painful. I had it cauterized, tried poultices, and all kinds of salves, but it was no good, and I continued to suffer from it for four years!

"A sample of Zam-Buk was one day given to me, and I used it, although the quantity was so small, it seemed to do me some good, so I purchased a further supply.

"Zach box did me more and more good, and to my delight, before I had been using Zam-Buk three weeks, I saw that it was going to heal the sore. In less than a month it was healed!"

"I know a lady in the east of the city, whose husband suffered for years with an open sore on his leg. On my recommendation, Zam-Buk was tried in that case. The other day when I saw her, she told me that it had healed the sore completely.

"My daughter, who lives in Lethbridge, Alta., has also used Zam-Buk with the same satisfactory result. I think it is, beyond all doubt, the finest healing balm known."

Such is the opinion of all persons who have really tried Zam-Buk. It is a sure cure for eczema, piles, abscesses, ulcers, scalp sores, ringworm cuts, burns, scalds, bruises, and all skin injuries and diseases. 50c. box, all druggists and stores, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. In case of skin disease use also Zam-Buk Soap, 25c. tablet.

When you have a bad cold you want the best medicine obtainable so as to cure it with as little delay as possible. Here is a druggist's opinion: "I have sold Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for fifteen years," says Emos Lollar of Saratoga, Ind., "and consider it the best on the market." For sale by all dealers.

A colored blacksmith recently announced a change in his business as follows:—

Notice—De co-partnership heretofore existing between me and Mose Skinner is hereby resolved. Dem what our de firm will settle wid me, and dem what de firm owes will settle wid Mose.

J. W. Copeland, of Dayton, Ohio, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for his boy who had a cold, and before the bottle was all used the boy's cold was gone. Is that not better than to pay a five dollar doctor's bill? For sale by all dealers.
