POTATO YIELD IN THE U. S. AWAY ABOVE THE ESTIMATE

Little Hope For Higher Prices Seen in Report of Market Bureau—Report of Famine in Ireland Denied.

The speculation in regard to the final report to be given out by the Bureau of Markets in regard to the potato yield in the United States was settled definitely this afternoon when the report of this department, made at 4 o'clock this afternoon, reached here. This report showed that the total yield in the United States was 454,784,000 bushels. This is an increase of 600,000 bushels over the estimate made last month. That this is a very discouraging report to give out to the potato growers cannot be helped.

The estimates made last month in regard to Maine ventured to prophesy a reduction in yield over the month before of between 20,000 and 50,000 bushels. This estimate was far off, for the official report shows a gain over last month of 2,700,000 bushels.

On British Market.

In the face of these astonishing figures there is not much hope that there will be an increase in the price paid by the buyers. The English market is reported to be in need of potatoes. This may or may not be true. The head of the local exchange would not commit himself in regard to the statement made a few days ago that there was a potato famine in Ireland. He said that there was a market on the other side of the water for our stock but at the present time he public were not in need of any great quantity.

Potatoes are being shipped in large quantities to the English market but this does not necessarily signify that the market for this commodity is good.

Looks Like Device.

There is no such thing as an absolute potato famine impending in Ireland and the effort being made by Senator M. Fernand and the Maine delegation in Congress at Washington to have 10,000,000 bushels of Maine potatoes shipped from Maine ports and transported to Ireland free of charge is ridiculous in the face of the telegrams received here by the local exchange that report conditions in the British Isles in regard to the potato crop as a whole good.

This looks like an effort on the part of the Maine shippers to bolster up the market for the immense stock that they have on hand. This seems to be working well for the United States buyers are taking a more hopeful slant at the situation and the market in New England is somewhat firmer.

Local shipeprs have shipped about 65 cars of potatoes since the first of November and the stock is gradually moving out. One car was shipped as far west as Calgary, Alberta. This was a test car and if this car lands at its destination in good condition the local shipers expect more orders from the west.
