What is CASTORIA

CASTORIA
Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhoea and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.
"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
Dr. G. C. Osmond, Lowell, Mass.
"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrups, and other harmful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
Dr. J. F. Kitchin, Conway, Ar.
The Centaur Company, 71 Murray St., New York City.

Castoria.
"I am pleased to report that economy has been attained by the Inspector and a saving effected in the several accounts in comparison with former years; and we can only recommend that the same care be taken in the future in keeping the expenses as small as possible consistent with the carrying out of the Act."
In the Inspector's report you will notice he shows a balance of $455.63 on hand during the three years of his inspection. This does not, however, show that this balance is in the Sec. Treasurer's hands after his account is paid. As the Inspector's report deals only with his own work for the three years, and does not include his $500 salary, or the assessments made on the county for same, and there being no assessments made in 1892, the Inspector's salary outside of the balance on hand at that time would have to come out of the fine collected.

Castoria.
The Sec. Treasurer's account with the Sec. Act Fund shows a balance on hand of $1254.46, less Inspector's account now due $950.67, which leaves a balance in Sec. Treasurer's hands of $303.79.
Respectfully submitted.
D. MORRISON, JOHN BETTS, JARED TOZER, THOS. W. FLETT, J. F. COOPER.
The report was adopted.
On motion of Coun. Morrison, Inspector Menzies' account was passed.

Castoria.
Coun. Jones—I move a vote of thanks to Inspector Menzies for the zeal and energy with which he has carried out the Canada Temperance Act.
Coun. Tozer—I second it.
On motion of Coun. Jones Mr. Menzies was appointed Inspector for the present year.
The Warden gracefully extended the thanks of the Council to Inspector Menzies.
Mr. Menzies said he was pleased at receiving a vote of thanks from this honorable body. No one could appreciate it more than he, especially as reports of booting had been circulated about him. If he wanted boot he would not get it, but need not go to the taxpayers for it, but take with the right hand and the left from those who were ready to give it. He had been told that $4000 would be paid for him if he would overlook certain parties for one year. If he could give in a better report, showing willful reductions of expenses he would do it.

Castoria.
On motion of Coun. Sullivan (Hardwick) the Inspector's salary was fixed at $800.
On motion of Coun. Morrison it was ordered that $250 be assessed towards paying the salary of the Inspector.
On motion of Coun. Betts the account of Wm. Irvine, $4.50, was passed.
On motion of Coun. Ullock parish officers were appointed for Glenelg.

Castoria.
On motion of Coun. Flett clause No. 1 of the Fishery River boom by-law was amended, naming boomage on logs $50 per thousand sup. ft. and on the timber 3 cents per ton, two cents to go to the boommaster and the rest to be applied to building blocks and repairing boats, the boommaster to give a bond of $400.
Coun. Flett said a certain amount of work is supposed to be done with the money collected, but he didn't know where the money went to.

Castoria.
On motion of Coun. Savoy parish officers were appointed for Alwick.
On motion of Coun. Anderson, Alwick road account with Secy. Treas. passed, and the balance of $508 was ordered to be handed to the commissioner for No. 2 district.
Coun. Smith reported on the petition of C. E. Fish and John Shirreff: The committee find the facts as stated therein correct in substance, and recommend that, with the consent of Mr. Robinson (the other member of the building committee) petitioners be paid $80 each. He moved its adoption.
Coun. Mesereau asked if Mr. Robinson had not given this $100 back to the county.
The Sec. Treas. said Mr. Robinson never had the money, and he didn't know what that gentleman's views were.

Castoria.
Coun. Smith said the money was now subject to the call of Mr. Robinson.
Coun. Ryan thought the money had been put to the credit of the county in the contingent fund.
Coun. Sullivan (Hardwick) said Mr. Robinson had claimed the money as his, but had said he would leave it where it was unless more was paid to Messrs. Fish and Shirreff, in which case he would claim his money. It is Mr. Robinson's money he likes to take it. The committee were allowed $300 and Messrs. Fish and Shirreff had taken $100 each, then Messrs. Shirreff and Fish thought they had a right to that $100 and asked for it.
Coun. Morrison said Coun. Sullivan was entirely astray. At the time the $400 was recommended Mr. Robinson had said he didn't want anything, as he had done no work, to give it to the others. When Messrs. Fish and Shirreff went for the money the Sec. Treas. could not give it to them without Mr. Robinson's signature, as it was payable to the committee. They went to Mr. Robinson, but he delayed signing the order and he had not done so.
Coun. Smith knew this statement to be correct. He recollected Mr. Robinson saying he had done none of the work and the money could go to the others.
Coun. Ryan had been a member of the committee. It was considered that $400 was enough to pay, and, as $100 had been paid to Mr. Brown for inspection, $300 was voted to the committee. The committee made up their minds to give the members of the building committee

Selected Literature.
SAVED BY THE BABY.
On a lovely hillside, among the rocks and white birches, stood, a cool many years ago, a little nest of a cottage that seemed really a part of its surroundings, for, being built of pine, it formed no contrast to the moss-grown boulders and the gray November sky. Trailing vines with their late fruit of scarlet berries ornamented the porch of the little cabin, from which could be seen a valley where a turkown road, like a green and white ribbon, shone uncertainly in the distance.
It was just this time in the year, three years before, that Jack Whelan had brought his young bride to this humble home now having been reared in these lonely wilds, she was almost as strong and courageous as Jack himself. Jack was a famous hunter and trapper and was away from home for days, leaving Grenell to the protection of a huge untamed tempered canine suggestively named Nero, who was chained at the rear of the cabin. Intrepid Grenell took care of the house, milked the cow, gathered the winter store of nuts, kept her small home spotlessly neat, and even wove carpeting: a carpet loom having been a wedding present from her mother, who had, with the caution of these times, sold her a bright-hued roll at the town, exchanging the proceeds for groceries and dry goods. Grenell loved her loom and spent many an hour in the little room in the loft which had been fitted up for its occupancy.
With the opening of spring came the journey to town to dispose of the furs and skins. This was taken on horseback and Jack, who was a fine rider, rode it one April, that the Grenell never forgot, that Jack disappeared down the winding path toward the highway, waving adieu to the pretty wife who watched him from the door. Even at this early hour there was a spectator. A dark-haired, sinister looking man, clad as a hunter, followed by a starved horse, crossed the clearing and disappeared in the woods beyond. Grenell watched him out of sight with a feeling of misgiving to which she was an utter stranger.
"Pshaw!" she said, giving herself a shake as she entered the house; "what an afraid of, with such a dog as Nero and a loaded revolver!"
As the day wore away with no incident, the evil-looking hunter passed out of her mind. A few days later he was brought back by her remembrance in a startling manner.
It was a warm day far in advance of the season. Little Benny, a sturdy baby of two years, played around the door, which was open. Grenell, seeing him contented, stole away to her room and sang softly as she went in the bright-hued rug. Suddenly the sound ceased in the middle of a bar—a sound of stealthy footsteps, and simultaneously the door of the little room closed and the stout wooden staple shot into its hasp. This simple device had been placed because it was easy of construction; and when at work Grenell always kept the door ajar, so that any means of opening from the inside had been considered unnecessary. Simultaneously with the locking of the door, Grenell threw herself like a tiger against it, then, realizing the futility of her heroism, she became suddenly calm. Varied sounds met her ears—evidently the intruders (how many were there, she wondered) were looking for something, for they were moving the furniture about, opening and shutting drawers. The dishes jingled and crashed as desperate hands moved them, and Grenell, who was in the room, saw the intruders' feet. She was the baby's gleeful shouts, showing that, as yet, he had met no stranger.
Grenell looked wildly around her narrow cage. One little window—only a few inches square, lighted it, and from it she could see Benny moving about in the sunshine, picking up things, treasures no doubt to his childish mind—and putting them carefully into his apron which he held by the corners. Nero suddenly became uneasy, and tugged frantically at his chain, seeing which Benny let go all his treasures and started up the hill towards the kennel. The mother's heart sank within her at the sight of this new danger. Would he dare to go near the growling dog? Yes, he kept on resolutely. She screamed to him from the window, but he only laughed, threw her a kiss, and went on his hands before him. He held out his hands coaxingly. Nero growled ominously, but passed and licked the little hands and face. Then Benny noticed something bright on the dog's collar and thought he would like it. He pulled and tugged with all his strength, and Nero, evidently thinking he was to be released, bent his head good-naturedly. To the agonized mother these minutes seemed hours as she stood at these four small lights of glass, vainly wishing its dimensions capable of admitting her plump form. Suddenly a gleeful shout from Benny, and he sat down to investigate the bright collar, while Nero shot like a dark streak to the house. The next instant growls and curses, intermingled with a terrible struggle, seemed to shake the little cabin's foundations.

"Oh, if Jack would only come!" moaned the wretched prisoner. "What if he shouldn't come to-night?" and her next breath was a gasp. After what seemed hours to her over-strained nerves, there was a sudden silence. What had happened? Had Nero been killed, or had he routed the enemy, whom she felt sure was the pseudo hunter, and, yes, he must have come after the money Jack got for the furs. She strained her ears to catch a sound from below that should relieve her suspense, and they were greeted by the plaintive little cry: "Mamma, mamma, where is he?"
"Mamma come by and bye," she called with affected cheerfulness, and Benny laughed and became silent. There another call, "Benny wants his supper."

"By and bye, when papa comes," she called back.
Gradually the shades fell around the little cabin. Benny was alone with the nameless horrors below—no mamma, no fire, no supper—while baby's protector was a prisoner to whom the day's events were mysterious unobserved. "Poor little Benny, he's gone to sleep without his supper, I guess," she said, with a sob in her throat.

It was quite dark when a cheery whistle announced the return of the hunter, and Grenell's over-taxed nerves gave way. "Jack! Jack!" she cried faintly, and became unconscious.

"Why, what are you all in the dark for?" was Jack's first salutation; then his foot caught on a soft substance, and Nero's answering bark astonished him beyond measure. Great was his horror when he succeeded in getting a light. His little Benny lay sleeping with his head pillowed on Nero's breast, while in the further corner lay the limp figure of a man. Blood drops gattered on the skin's white floor and scraps of the man's clothing scattered here and there showed the desperate struggle that had occurred before Nero caught him by the throat and killed him. Everything was in the direst confusion—there was no fire, no wife! where was Grenell? He loudly called—no answer rewarded him. He searched the little room—alas! that was empty, done, and, because he must look some where, he sprang to the loft. The door was closed—of course she was not there, but—he held the light above his head as he peered inside. His heart gave a quick bound of terror, and he raised the woman's head tenderly.

"Ah, he breathed," she had only faintly—better so, till I clear the house of its horrors."

When Grenell opened her eyes she saw lying on her bed, Benny was sleeping beside her, Nero lay stretched on the best rug the house afforded, and Jack was getting supper.
