"It's too dangerous," the men below heard him shout. "Do it anyway," commanded Bernack.

McKENZIE ON CANADA'S FUTURE. In an interview with a representative of the Pall Mall Gazette, Mr. William Mackenzie, the president of the Canadian Northern Railway, said that Canada was today building more railways than the United States, and exports kept on mounting up, and her manufactures were being sold in other parts of the world.

Asked what the plans of the Canadian Northern were, Mr. Mackenzie said he could not tell at present. "There will not be a great deal of new construction work to deal with in the present year," he said. "This year will be largely one of consolidation. There will, of course, be some extensions of branch lines, but main lines will have to stand over for the most part for another year. We shall employ many men and spend as much money as in previous years, but it will be largely directed towards improving our present line. Special attention will be given to improving the road-bed, and there will be a large amount of building at the various money centers. At the present time we have an order over one million pounds worth of locomotives and a rolling stock of all descriptions, and large deliveries of this new equipment are now being received. We should have ordered more had it been possible to place orders with Canadian manufacturers, but this, even working at the highest pressure, as they are doing, was quite impracticable. The Canadian West is a big, growing boy. The suit of clothes made for him this year won't button him in the next year, so it is the matter of railway equipment in Western Canada; we have to keep on increasing it all the time during the growing period, the outlook is entirely satisfactory, and all the indications warrant an expectation that the present will carry us over the property throughout the whole of Canada."

Attending to financial matters, Mr. Mackenzie said: "I think that the temporary stringency, affecting only a certain class of businesses in the United States, is not an end in itself, and that his main object in life now is to enjoy those simple pastimes of which he is so fond."

Wellman's performance on the face of the water was a distinct failure, and Wellman kicked up a lot of mud in the bottom of the river. He was injured at the time when he was in the water, and he was taken to the hospital.
