When the Children Come Between.

Winning a husband is not enough; one has to keep him. There are a good many thoughtless girls who seem to feel that since they have won a lover with their prettiness and charm, they have won the right to keep him; but the right to keep a man has to be earned by constant consideration and tenderness. Life is not a random playground; it is a great camping ground peopled with soldiers who have to be drilled and disciplined. Those who show the keenest sense of duty, the most responsive intelligence, the greatest willingness to carry out perfectly the tasks imposed upon them, are the ones who win the highest rewards. Every wife wants the reward of keeping unspotted the love of her husband; that lies largely in her own hands.

The world seems to have decided that the greatest bond to unite husband and wife are children. There are women who take the point of view that a woman who wears herself out bearing and rearing children cannot keep her husband's love; that he will seek a younger and fresher face. In most cases children are essential to complete happiness in marriage. There are childless couples who, while regretting the lack of children, still feel that they are all in all to each other; and there are many others who feel that they have missed the best of life because they are childless, but who find what compensation they can in nephews and nieces and the children of friends. It is the law of life to want to see one's own flesh and blood about one, to hope to accomplish in the younger generation the things in which one has failed oneself. So that the average woman counts her children the strongest tie that binds her husband to her. But if children may bind, they also may separate. The husband should never be sacrificed to the children—for the sake of himself, the wife and the children.

Husband Neglected for Children.

There is really no need to choose between husband and children, but too many young women do not know that they are choosing. A young wife has had a relatively serene courtship, and has safely weathered the initial hazardous month of marriage. After the first baby comes, her husband seems to love her more than ever. As time goes on, and other children are born, it seems to her that their interests are merely growing broader and closer than they were. Too often she is so absorbed in her motherhood that she scarcely is aware of her husband's deeper needs—Maude Radford Warren in Woman's World for June.

Minard's Liniment Co. Limited, Yarmouth, N.S.

Gentlemen.—In January last, Francis Leclair, one of the men employed by me, working in the lumber woods, had a tree fall on him, crushing him fearfully. He was, when found, placed on a sled and taken home, where grave fears were entertained for his recovery, his hips being badly bruised and his body turned black from his ribs to his feet. We used MINARD'S LINIMENT on him freely to deaden the pain and with the use of three bottles he was completely cured and able to return to his work. SAUVEUR DUVAL, Elgin Road, L'Islet Co., Que.

The Church and the Masses

Rev. F. Lewis Donaldson, of St. Mark's, Leicester, made some strong observations regarding the attitude of the Church to social problems in his sermon at Bow Church, Cheapside.

"The Church," said Mr. Donaldson, "had been faithless to the mission given her, and had been opposed to the movements of the people. They were told about mansions in the skies, and allowed to live in hovels. They were told of the white robes of the redeemed, and allowed to live in rags and tatters. They were told of the new Jerusalem, the heavenly city, and were allowed to live in cities of dreadful night—Manchester, Liverpool, and Leeds. There had never been a greater uplifting of the voice of the people—which was the voice of God—than to-day.

"Why had the Church been silent? Why has our only concern, apparently, that we should get the miners back to work? 'We are in the presence,' said Mr. Donaldson, 'of forces that are shaking society to its foundations. I can almost hear the rocking of it as I speak. I see in these movements the working of the Holy Spirit. The people have seen a vision. The alienation of the masses from the Church will never cease until the Church breaks free from her class bonds and responds to these passionate appeals for life in the name of Him who came to bring it abundantly.'

The Beauty Parlor.

BY H. L. RANN.

The beauty parlor is a place where a woman exchanges hard-earned money for a complexion and figure which her husband has no recollection of seeing before. It is a strict one-price concern, said price being sufficient to etch a deep, flowing convolution in hubby's income. This resort is liberally patronized by people who are not in the habit of blighting anybody with their fatal gift of beauty, and it is the cause of some very abrupt and terrifying transformations. The beauty parlor makes a speciality of fitting the beltless Grecian waist to lean women who wish to discard forever the svelte curtain-rod effect so popular last season, thereby giving them the severe, classic lines of a straw tick. It also deals in the calcimine complexion, which is guaranteed not to crack, peel, rub off or absorb anything but a month's salary. This complexion is a very handy toilet article, as it can be taken off at night and re-touched in a shade suitable to any occasion, from a gentle pallor to a bright Venetian red. The crowning glory of the beauty parlor, however, is the paraffine bolster, which is used to remove hillocks and hummocks from the human neck and encourage the propagation of the cocktail toilette. It is quite discouraging to enter a beauty parlor for the first time, apparently in a state of perfect health, and have a sharp-eyed specialist point out a series of eruptive blemishes ranging from the protruberant eye-tooth to the low, retreating instep of the woman has taken one term of lessons at a beauty parlor and practiced diligently at home on the dumb bells and powder rag, she is liable to start an exhibition of affection on the part of her husband which would prove a pleasing departure from the regular order of business. If there were more beauty parlors in this country there would be fewer frost-bitten husbands and less acrimony and biting repartee at the breakfast table.

Brave Armenian.

Rescued Man Who Was Being Carried Over Niagara Falls.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., May 19.—One of the most daring rescues in the history of Niagara Falls was effected to-day by a twenty-year-old Armenian named Aran Kevorkian, of this city, who waded out waist deep into the rapids a short distance above the cataract and pulled to shore with a pike pole the unconscious form of Henry J. Smith, 50 years old, a resident of No. 18 Beech Street, Buffalo. Kevorkian was assisted by David Gordon and Park Constable Thomas Harrington, who formed a human chain anchoring the Armenian to the shore and enabling him to resist the current which was especially strong to-day on account of the high water.

Smith was walking along the narrow path skirting the river about 300 feet above the falls when he missed his footing and fell into the turbulent stream. He soon became exhausted in his efforts to reach shore, and was floating with his head under water when caught by Kevorkian with his pike pole less than 100 feet above the brink. Smith was taken to police headquarters and soon restored to consciousness, apparently none the worse for his hazardous experience.
