Hashing Up the Guest.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

Not long ago I was a guest at a little week end house party, at which one of the chief "indoor" diversions was discussing and making fun of the guests of the previous week.

It was amusing, in a way, for our hosts were clever in their "and good satirists." They could pick people to pieces to perfection. One couldn't help laughing. But even while one laughed a cold shiver ran up one's back—a shiver of promotion as to what would happen next week when someone else was the audience.

Did Our Grandmothers Do It.

I think this habit of talking over guests in front of other guests is one of the unfortunate tricks that people nowadays permit themselves all too often. Perhaps our grandmothers did, too. I don't know. I prefer to think that they didn't, and for that matter that our grandchildren won't. I hope it's just a passing phase of bad manners.

I wish we talked guests over much less, even in the privacy of our immediate families. It is sometimes a temptation when one has carried the guest's bag to the train and picked up the guest room and drawn a sigh, half of regret at his going, half of relief at the inevitable let down, to serve him up "at the next meal for conversational sauce.

Takes the Bloom off Hospitality.

In a way there is nothing wrong about it if one guards one's tongue and says nothing untruthful or needlessly unkind. And yet I don't like it. It takes the bloom off the flower of hospitality.

In some families the habit of criticism of outsiders, guests and others, is second nature. The children grow up in this atmosphere of sharp, caustic criticisms, sometimes witty sometimes not. And I call it a very unhealthy atmosphere. Of course human nature is the most interesting thing in the world. To me at least. I like books with as much as possible about people and as little as possible about scenery, and comparatively little about events, in them. Also I infinitely prefer portraits to landscapes. And one would lose a big interest out of life if one did not discuss one's friends and neighbors. But discussion—fair, analytical, kindly discussion—is one thing and the habit of unamiable criticism is quite another. Which do you have in your home?

Minard's Liniment Co. Limited.

Gentlemen, — Ever since coming home from the Boer War I have been bothered with running fever sores on my legs. I tried many salves and liniments; also doctored continuously for the blood, but got no permanent relief, till last winter when my mother got me to try MINARD'S LINIMENT. The effect of which was almost magical. Two bottles completely cured me and I have worked every working day since.

Yours gratefully,
JOHN WALSH.

When selecting poultry see that the feet are soft and moist, the eyes clear and the flesh plump.

Large radishes sliced, laid in cold salt water for awhile and then boiled are very good eating.

Add a little curry powder to warmed-over soups or stews. It will make a new dish out of them.

THE BOOSTER.

The Booster is a plain American citizen with springs in his legs and optimism under his hat. It is harder to discourage a real, live booster than it is to sidetrack a candidate for county office who has the church vote in his vest pocket.

All great American cities have been produced and polished off by the booster. There are thousands of thriving, red-blooded burps in Uncle Sam's domain which would still be getting their mail by a star route if it were not for the booster family and their descendants. One of the surest signs that the booster spirit has struck in is when money can be raised for a new intervention without holding a special election and burying the next generation in debt up to his neck. The booster who is always willing to boost with his voice, but leaves his check-book at home on the sideboard, never built any opera houses or concrete bridges or Y. M. C. A. gymnasiums or hotels with tile floors and individual soap facilities. Money talks with the booster, and any other kind of conversation falls upon his ear with a dull thud.

The booster is surrounded with a great many difficulties, chief among which is the village knocker.

The booster is surrounded with a great many difficulties, chief among which is the village knocker, who is usually an active and industrious citizen with money out at interest. If the strident voice of the knocker had been listened to with proper reverence, there wouldn't be four blocks of paved street between the Hudson River and the Mormon tabernacle. The booster, however, goes along with his head up and his pocketbook open and invests in everything that will put his town on the map in red ink.

The most liberal booster in any town is usually the newspaper, which makes enemies by advocating cross-stake block paving, sewer extensions and public playgrounds. This is a source of profound grief to the delinquent subscriber, who cancels his subscription for the coming year and greets the collector with an icy stare. If the booster newspapers of the country had the money which they have lost through advocating new sidewalks and city halls, more editors would ride in their own automobiles.

If there were more boosters mobilized for service in the trenches there would be fewer towns looking as if they needed the attention of an undertaker.

Use the water the vegetables are cooked in to make gravies and the flavor will be improved.

When watering a garden remember that a thorough soaking is better than frequent sprinklings.

Says the High Fleet Goes to Sea Often.

Visitor to Wilhelmshaven Reports Ships Go Out Usually Twice a Week. —Never Venture Very Far.

Copenhagen, Aug. 15.—The German fleet, according to an informant of The Associated Press who recently had been at Wilhelmshaven, justifies its name of High Sea Fleet by running out from Wilhelmshaven with considerable regularity, some times two or three times a week, however, and never goes very far out to sea.

The High Sea Fleet usually leaves Wilhelmshaven in the evening and is back by early dinner time between 11 o'clock and noon on the following day. On a few occasions it has remained out longer, but only because thick weather set in, making a passage through the German mine fields dangerous and forcing it to remain in the shelter of Heligoland until the weather cleared.

A great part of the time the battleships and cruisers comprising the fleet are anchored in security behind mine fields and nets and a triple line of pickets protecting the entrance to the base. Once in March the fleet had a considerable period of enforced repose, when British mine layers, taking advantage of thick weather, sowed the coastal waters so full of mines that the German vessels were unable to leave the harbor.

The enlisted personnel of the fleet knew nothing of American preparations for active participation in the war. The men were told by their officers that America's declaration of war on Germany was only issued as a cover to preparations against Japan and that American troops would not be used in Europe.

The German losses in submarines, according to the informant, have been twenty to twenty-two boats, this figure apparently covering the losses since the start of the unrestricted submarine warfare campaign. Four additional boats are said to have been lost in the Mediterranean.

Germany now has almost 300 submarines, the newest boats of the big seagoing type and armed with a six-inch gun. This armament appeared on boats commissioned in the middle of June, the earlier boats of this latest, or D. E. E. type, and the preceding C. E. E. type being armed with a pair of 105 millimeter guns, approximately four-inch guns, fore and aft.

The 300 submarines, however, include a large number of the so-called canal boat type, built for passage through the Belgian canals to Zeebrugge, and which are of inferior armament and a smaller radius of action.

Everyday Etiquette.

"When you escort a girl home from a party should you ask if you may come in, it not being very late, or wait for her to ask you to come in?" "When you take a girl home in the evening, she will probably ask you to come in if it is sufficiently early and if she knows that her mother is at home and that it will be convenient. If she does not invite you, there is probably some reason and it would be better not to," answered his aunt.

SOLDIERS' GRAVES IN

A number of graves on gardeners have just been extended the graves of soldiers in France, and within a few days are going over to Belgium. They are enrolled as members of the Women's Auxiliary Army Corps, engaged for the duration of the war, and will, I understand, be the direction of the graves in the botanical gardens, and in London authorities. Mr. Coit, the well-known horticultural matters, is expected. The problem of all plants that will be permanent and permanent, and that is a little care. There was a that trees from the graves of dominions should be one of the graves near the botanical gardens, and in London authorities. It will be interesting to see whether this idea is carried out or not.

EXTENDING THE BIVOL

Meetings are intended to large centers of population, part of a movement of the Government an alteration of force law as a measure of reconstruction after the war. ment has considerable support members of both Houses, as was shown at a held at Westminster review idea is the promotion of act that all decrees or orders alike shall have a decree absolute of the of marriage. An amendment would be an end.
