LATEST.

TALKS TO CORRESPONDENTS. PARIS, March 9. Stephen Pichon, the French Foreign Minister, in his talk with the correspondents to-day described the bearing of the food situation in Germany, on the speedy conclusion of peace. He said that the urgent need of supplying Germany was recognized by all the Governments represented at Paris. The hunger with which Germany is confronted, he added, was a bad counsellor. No one could be dead to the inhumanity of continuing present conditions there, and the Supreme Council had resolved to send to Germany all the food that country required. On the other hand, however, this could be done if the Germans ceased working and did nothing to make certain that the expense caused to the Entente countries by the destruction and damage if the war should be met. In signing the armistice last January, Germany agreed to hand over her commercial fleet to be used in re-victualing Europe generally.

HELD BY ICE.

The D. P. Ingraham was trying to leave yesterday morning for the scene of the stranded steamer Appennine, but the ice being in all along the coast from there to here, she was obliged to abandon the attempt.

THE ORIGIN OF THE MONROE DOCTRINE.

James Monroe was of Scottish ancestry, but was born in Westmoreland County, Virginia, U.S.A. He went direct from William and Mary College to John Washington's Army, and was wounded at Trenton, but he attained the rank of lieutenant-colonel before the War of Independence was over. He became a member of the Virginia Assembly in 1783, and a year later entered Congress. In 1785, he was appointed Chairman of the Committee framing the Constitution. In the United States Senate, 1790-94, he opposed the policy of the Federalists, led by Washington, and later, accepted the post of Minister to France, but was recalled for displaying too much sympathy with the French. On his return he commenced a vigorous crusade against the Executive, and thus endeared himself to the Democrats. For a period of three years he was Governor of Virginia, and was then selected to go to France to negotiate for the purchase of Louisiana. On returning home he was elected a second time to be Governor of his native State. He became President on March 4, 1816, and held that office until 1820, a period that will ever be remembered for the promulgation of what is now known as the "Monroe Doctrine," embodying the principle that the American continents are henceforth not to be considered as subjects for future colonization by any European Power.

THE ORIGIN OF THE MONROE DOCTRINE.

This pronouncement, which has had far-reaching consequences, and which was suggested to the American Government by the British statesman, Canning, was contained in Monroe's message to the Congress in 1823. On the expiration of his second period of occupancy of the Presidency, Monroe retired to his seat at Oak Hill, Virginia, where he entertained on so lavish a scale that he burdened himself with debt, and was compelled to seek assistance of relatives in New York, among whom he died in 1831.

ally, and Germany particularly, yet continued the Minister, at a recent meeting at Spa the German plenipotentiaries declared that the arrangement was unsatisfactory and that they would absolutely refuse to part with their ships. The allies were willing, M. Pichon went on, not only to supply food but to accord credit to Germany, but Germany must first declare her willingness to live up to the conditions of the January armistice. The Foreign Minister defended the Peace Conference against the charges that its work had been slow saying: "It may have seemed slow at first, but there has been much progress during the last few days."

S. S. APPENINE.

The s.s. Appennine was in the same position last evening, and the prospects of refloating her were none too good. The steamers Portia, Seal and Meigle were at the scene and tried to tow her off, but the Portia broke a 14 inch manilla line and a 7 inch steel hawser.

SEAL'S REPORT.

The s.s. Seal, Capt. Randell, which was at the scene of the wreck, returned to port at 4 o'clock this morning. The captain reports that the Appennine is in a very precarious position, a sharp rock having penetrated her bottom, the jagged sides holding firmly. He hopes that she will not be gotten from there until the spring tides, which are due on the 15th. The Appennine was going full speed through a tickle when she was caught by the incoming ice and carried onto the Point. The Seal is now preparing for the coming seal hunt.
