Ireland's Patron Saint.

Told of in story, sung of by the poets, the life of Ireland's Patron Saint offers at once an inspiration and an incentive to—not Irishmen alone, but all classes and creeds who entertain a desire to emulate the most humble but yet the most powerful of missionaries, the real servant of the servants of God, in life and action. Devoted to the extension of the Kingdom of his Lord and Master, St. Patrick braved all dangers, heroically encountered and conquered all difficulties, and laid the foundations of a career such as no builder ever dreamed of. Well might it be said of the noble, yet humble, Patrick, in the words of the poet who shone many centuries after him:

"His life was gentle, and the elements so mixed in him
That nature might stand up and say to all the world
This was a man."

And so it is that wherever Irishmen are assembled, no matter in what remote corner of the world, the mention of St. Patrick's Day brings to them memories of the former glories of their race, and all true sons of Erin, whether alone or in numbers do not allow this day of days to them, go by without entering into the celebrations which custom has sanctioned and time approved. More eulogies have been pronounced over St. Patrick, more panegyrics have been proclaimed to his life, work, and memory, than to any other saint in the calendar. Students and scholars, both ecclesiastic and lay have excelled themselves in giving to their auditors, from pulpit and platform the history of the life and works of the missionary saint of the Green Isle, and he is, perhaps, the most familiar figure in modern history either sacred or profane.

Wrapped up in tradition as is the life and work of St. Patrick, it is difficult to know from the legends surrounding his activities, just where his mission began and ended, but enough material has been gleaned from the past to give a fairly accurate description of his ministrations in Ireland. Preachers have declared his undisputed right to the title with which he has been honored: lecturers have proven his ancestry, his birth, his labors, his success and death, and his subsequent canonization. And, to quote that scripture of which he was so learned an exponent, "His works do follow him." Honored by all, the day of the titular patron saint of Ireland, is celebrated the world over, and for one day in the year, at least, the green and the gold of the island of saints and scholars predominates over all others, while for always the saltire cross of St. Patrick ranks with those of St. George and St. Andrew, equal in all things, in the Union flag of the Empire—one and indivisible.

The following short sketch of the life of St. Patrick, taken from the writings of Probus, in the seventh century, and compared with that of Jocelin, a Cistercian Monk of the twelfth century, and corrected, may be interesting:

"St. Patrick was born in Scotland, near where Glasgow now stands. The date of his birth was somewhere near the close of the fourth century, but as to the year itself, authorities widely differ—372, 455, 464 and 493 all being given by various biographers, but as the year of his birth is scarcely known within a century or so, it is too much to expect the month or the day, but the day assigned to St. Patrick in the calendar is March 17th. His father was of good family, and, while the future saint was still under the paternal roof, God manifested to him by divers visions that he was destined for the great work of the conversion of Ireland, at that time plunged into idolatry. Hence he resigned his birthright and social position, and devoted himself entirely to the salvation of the people of Ireland, suffering at their hands and for their sakes much persecution. He was ordained deacon and priest and subsequently consecrated bishop. He travelled over the whole of Ireland founding monasteries and filling the country with churches and schools of piety and learning. Animated by a spirit of perfect charity and humility, he demonstrated not only the faith, but the spirit of his Master, and the result of his forty years of labor was to change Ireland from a land of idolaters into a seat of learning and piety, so that it received the title of the Island of Saints, and was for centuries a land of mental and spiritual light."

Essex Motors.

You hear much these days about the car of the future.

But who describes it other than that it must be light in weight, fine in quality, enduring, reliable and of superior performance.

The ESSEX has more than one economy appeal. In gasoline, oil, tires and repair cost it is distinctly attractive. And, of course, its performance is now recognized by all motorists. Not many question ESSEX ability to out-perform other cars that it meets.

Mr. C. F. Hunziker.

Mr. Hunziker, B.S.A., M.S.A., is Professor of Dairy Husbandry, Purdue University, and Chief of Dairy Department of the Indian Agricultural Experiment Station, Lafayette, Ind. In his treatise on Condensed Milk and Milk Powders he states: "The product of the Marcell and Cere process (Kilm) is without question superior to any milk powder produced hereinafter mentioned. It embodies the three all-important characteristics of a desirable and successful milk powder; namely, it contains less than the minimum amount of moisture which permits of bacterial action, its butterfat is retained in the globular form, and does therefore mix with water readily, forming a complete emulsion, and its albumen is present in its natural non-coagulated and soluble form, ensuring complete solubility of this dried milk in water."

Another Canadian 1919 Record.

THE BEST REPUTATION OF ALL.

Nothing too good can be said of the London Life Insurance Company because of the high character of its managerial policy. It has interpreted its duty to the public as an unconditional obligation to look after their interests. The result is seen in the dividends declared this year to the policyholders. These dividends are far beyond the amounts originally promised to the public. Here is the record of four such cases:—

Age at Issue	Dividends Promised	Dividends Declared	Ratio to Promise
23	$ 520	$ 966	186%
24	600	1,069	178%
29	900	1,577	175%
55	1,510	2,630	174%

Now the London Life has never aimed at size. It has long been content to go along at a reasonable pace, preferring to be of the best quality. But the public soon appreciates merit, and consequently the company has been jumping ahead recently almost in spite of itself. In 1919 its new business shot ahead to nearly $25,000,000, which is far beyond what the company expected or wanted. Its assets increased 17.5 per cent. and amount to $10,810,543, and its surplus increased nearly 25 per cent. over its liabilities on the Government standard, and is now $1,155,398 above the liabilities on that standard.

It is not too much to say that the London Life is one of the best managed life companies in the world, from the policyholder's point of view. It is one of the few which have been able to maintain policyholder's dividends throughout the war and the influenza epidemic, and it is almost alone in paying far greater dividends than the policyholders were led to expect.

Had Nothing to Do With It.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—Having spent the greater part of the day in denying the fact, I now ask you to please publish that I had absolutely nothing to do with the letter in last Saturday's Star, signed "One of the Spares," nor have I the slightest idea as to whom the writer is. I can easily understand why the fans look to me in the matter, as the letter was written in such a way as to make one think it came from an "Old Timer," and as I was the only one of the so-called, acting as a spare for the city team, naturally there was only one conclusion to arrive at.

If at any time I wish to write the press, you may be sure it will be over my own name, as I have no desire to have others blamed for any doings of mine.

Thanking you for space,

I am, sincerely yours,

KARL TRAPNELL.
