Love Letters of of Pompeii Girls.

Among the remarkable discoveries in the new excavations at Pompeii are several poetic love-letters of patrician (well-born) girls to successful gladiators. The letters are on ivory tablets, and one is addressed to a gladiator named Strax, The letter, translated,

"Art thou Phoebus Apollo in the body of Hercules? Indeed thou art a god to me. Thy beauty and strength have blotted from my eyes all other men. I am young, and the suitors I despise say that I am bea will await thee, beloved one, near the Temple of Isis." Inscriptions on the walls under drawings of gladiators show that girls named Chloe, Lydia, and Comelia were in love with them.

Here is the ardent effusion of Marcus Crassius to a dancing girl: "Julia-from whom her Marcus has received fresh pledges of love-thou art fairer than Aurora, rosy in her robes of dawn. I love thee with a heart that can hold none other. "My litter-bearers stand before thy gate to bear thee whither thou wilt go in the Street of Abundance. Spare not the sesterees (coins) of thy Marcus, and when he shall sup with thee see that thy throat of swan's down, thine arms of rose-tinted marble, are decked with gems comporting with thy matchless charms."

Freak Legislators.

The law just passed by the Senate of Utah, limiting the height of woman's heels to a modest inch and a half, is matched by a recent law which makes it a misdemeanour for a Maryland woman to appear in a public place in a hat with a greater diameter than ten inches.

It is not long since an edict was publishe din Texas making tickling unlawful. published in Texas making tickling another person was made liable to a fine not exceeding $100. Chicago has a law which forbids a man to slap his wife, under penalty of a fine ranging from one dollar for a smack with the left hand to five dollars for a slap while sitting down. A husband recently qualified for the whole series, and handed over his $11 "like a man," declaring that it "was cheap at the price." But what are we to say to the edict that inflicts a heavy fine for a kiss, which may be as innocent as no doubt it is pleasant? Thus, at Rochester, New York, one Charles Drobble recently paid $400 for kissing Mary Himple, his clerk, once only; while Marshall McDaniels got off with a marshall mcDaniels got on with a $150 fine for kissing Sallie Jones 150 times—a modest dollar for a kiss.

The bachelor is the unhappy but of many of these freak laws. Thus in Maine all unmarried men over thirty years of age are taxed ten dollars of prohibit bachelors from being call-"Mister," "so that no one can be ceived." ZZ ZZZ ZZZ ...
