Mr. Gladstone's Speech at Chester. London, Jan. 23.—Mr. Gladstone, speaking at Chester yesterday, declined to criticize the course of Lord Salisbury in the dispute with Portugal until he is more fully informed as to the details of the case. He considered it a duty to avoid cavilling at the foreign policy of the Government. Turkey appeared again as inviting England to intervene to protect the suffering population of Crete and Armenia, but he warned the Sultan that England's reply would involve a reference to that mockery of justice, the trial of Moussa Bey, and the reply would be that he would not obtain British sympathy in times of trial and difficulty unless he governed with humanity and justice. Referring to the United States and the plans for an enlarged navy, Mr. Gladstone said the worst of it was that while America would cite England's example for enlarging her navy England will give a similar excuse for further naval expenditure. It is a matter of deep sorrow to reflect that the very ostentations addition to the defenses of a country made under a real or pretended necessity is made an apology for the increase of the burdens of every other country. Under profession of an additional security the policy of governments thus tended more and more to jeopardize the peace of the world. The country would be likely soon to hear much about the Parnell Commission. Without anticipating the judgment or breathing a word of suspicion of the judges, he would say the subject must be probed with the deepest attention of the country and of Parliament. His opinion was that the cumbrous proceedings constituted a case of oppression practiced upon an individual by a Legislative Chamber and an Executive Government without a parallel since the evil times of the reign of Charles II. London, Jan. 23 .- Mr. Gladstone, speak ing at Chester yesterday, declined to criti-

oppression practiced upon an individual by a Legislative Chamber and an Executive Government without a parallel since the evil times of the reign of Charles II. He commended Scotland's unvarying support of Liberalism. If Scotland demanded home rule neither Tories nor dissident Liberals would blow the war trumpets against it, in the name either of the Union or the integrity of the Empire. Scotland had a good claim to home rule because the Tory majority assisted a handful of Scotch members to out-vote the Scotch majority. The conflict for home rule is a terrible struggle of powerful influence on one side against conviction on the other side. It is the principle of Liberalism to trust the people, qualified by prudence. It is the principle of Toryism to distract the people, qualified by fear. He was confident of the ultimate judgment of the country. If ready to meet dissolution, but without impatience for it, it was because he felt strongly the justice of the cause, and he knew it must triumph.

Dalton McCarthy on the Dual Language First Reading.

[Special to the ADVERTISER.] OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 23.—The Ottawa Citizen—which of all the Tory organs sits nore at the fountain of inspiration—has a vigorous editorial this morning on "Annexationist White." It begins by quoting White's utterances when in augurated Mayor of Windsor, and asks: "Has Mr. White the brazen effrontery to contend that he can be a loyal Canadian and at the same time advocate a policy of wiping his over for absorption by a foreign power?" After lecturing the erstwhile lieutenant of Mr. Meredith most severely it closes by Conservatives of the county of Essex to remove the name of Traitor White from its list of members. In advocating such action by the Conservatives of Essex we do not in the least degree advocate restriction of any man's right to think or speak anything he ove the name of Traitor White from its will, but between the exercise of the fullest freedom of opinion and the proclamation of disloyalty to one's country we draw a dis-tinct and well-defined line. Let Traitor White be removed, and that too without

Mr. McCarthy introduced his bill to abolish the official use of the French lan-guage in the Northwest Territories. De-parting from the usual custom, he made quite a length speech on introducing the measure, and his speech was of a nature to cause considerable feeling among the French-Canadian members. The following is the text of Mr. McCarthy's bill:

Whereas it is expedient, in the interest of the national unity of the Dominion, that there should be community of language among the people of Canada, and that the enactment in the Northwest Territories Act allowing the use of the French languages should be expurged therefrom, therefore Her Majesty, by and with the advice of the Senate and House of Commons, enacts as follows:

All ordinances made under this act shall be printed in both those languages.

act shall be printed in ooth those languages.

Mr. McCarthy proceeded to give the history of official French in Canada. There was not a word, from the time of the conquest till the union, giving authority for the use of the French as an official language in this country. Nothing could be gathered from the Br itish North America Act that the dual language was to be permitted in from the Br itish North America Act that the dual language was to be permitted in any other quarter of the Dominion. It was then clear that any legislative warrant for the use of dual languages was founded simply upon the will of Parlianent. He argued that the dual language system was inimical to liament. He argued that the dual language system was inimical to perfect unity. If, in truth, it was in the interest of the Dominion that there should be one race, one nationality and one national life, they ought to bring about that result. The general opinion prevailed that this question had come to a point when it was likely to cause, as it had already caused, difficulties in this Dominion. reading, have an opportunity of discussing this grave question in all its bearings.

Mr. Laurier said it would have been preferable if, as was the custom, nothing controversial had been said on the first reading. Mr. McCarthy would allow that a man might be in favor of the bill, with the mover, and yet not agree with a great deal of what he said. For his own part he did not propose to express an opinion until the second reading. There was a great deal in Mr. McCarthy's remarks to which exception could be taken. He did not even propose to do that. He would, however, give him one piece of information as to why the Liberal candidate was defeated in Richelieu. It was by the rise of the notes of the defunct Merchants' Bank. (Hear, hear, and laughter.)
