Bound to be Beaten. LONDON, Dec. 11 .- The Graphic to-day publishes an interview with Admiral of the Fleet Sir G. T. P. Hornby, first and the Fleet Sir G. T. P. Hornby, first and principal aide-de-camp to the Queen. Admiral Hornby says Great Britain could not hold the Mediterranean with its present fleet unless the British naval force is stronger than the French force. The British in the event of war are bound to be beaten, for French officers and seamen of to-dayknow their work as well and have as good ships as the British. Gibraltar and Malta should both be strengthened.

PARIS, Dec. 11 .- The outrage in the Chamber of Deputies on Saturday is about the only topic of conversation in the public resorts of this city. It is the general opinion that the time has arrived when the overnment must put aside all maudlin sentiment and treat these Anarchist as would-be-murderers. It is believed that every Anarchist and all their sympathizers should be hunted to earth and punishment fitted to their dastardly crimes meted out to them. Public opinion is very bitter against the Anarchists.

Belle Bilton's Marriage Recalled. LONDON, Dec. 11.—Litigation over the will of the fourth Earl of Clancarty has been settled. The present Earl (who achieved great notoricty by his marriage to Belle Bilton, a music hall singer, and his sabsaquent unsuccessful attempt to procure a divorce from her) obtains the furniture, pictures and plate left at Garbaily, the Earl's residence at Ballinasloe, county Galway, and $30,000 from his mother, Eliza, Dowager Lady Clancarty, who pays all the costs. Fighting the Lords.

London, Dec. 11 .- Friday night's action of the House of Lords in adding a "contracting-out" amendment to the Employers Liability Bill is practically accepted by the Government as a declaration of open war against the principle of the bill. If the Lords stand firm this must precipitate a conflict, which, very pessibly, will end in the speedy dissolution of Parliament and an appeal to the people of Great Britain on the great issue of "mending or ending" the House of Lords, with Home Rule and other Liberal measures as only subordinate ques-

In fact, the News deliberately intimates this morning that the entire bill must now be abandoned "until the House of Lords has been dealt with." When it is remembered that Arnold Morley, the Postmaster General, is the chief owner of the News, the significance of this statement becomes apparent, as it doubtless was inspired by Mr. Gladstone and the Cabinet.

The Chronicle, a recognized and able organ of the masses, goes further still. It says: "The attitude of the Lords is an invitation to a trial of strength which, for aught we know, may bring us nearer revolution than any political question since 1832. The challenge will, we hope, be instantly taken un."

stantly taken up."

In the event of an appeal to the country
Prime Minister Gladstone may force a dis-In the event of an appeal to the country Prime Minister Gladstone may force a dissolution before January is over, and Great Britain may then be plunged into a conflict more momentous than any since that, when, on March 19, 1649, "the Commons of England assembled in Parlament, finding by too long experience that the House of Lords is useless and dangerous to the people of England," did ordain and enact, "that from henceforth the House of Lords in Parliament shall be and is hereby abolished and taken away, and that the Lords shall not from henceforth meet or sit in said house called the Lord's House, or in any other house or place whatsoever as a House of Lords." The return of Charles II. brought about a revocation of this act, but it does not seem improbable that it may now be re-enacted after another 245 years.

The fact that the Centrists voted in favor of the treaty of Roumania originated in the rumor that the Government had promised to give effect to the Reichstag vote to recall the Jesuits to Germany. The Associated Press learns that nothing of the kind occurred and that the present indications are quite to the contrary. The Emperor has congratulated the Catholic Prince Fuerstenberg for his vote against the repeal of the Jesuit law, and a movement is beginning to manifest itself in evangelical circles against the repeal.

English Girls Growing Prettier.

English Girls Growing Prettier.

The question of the beauty of English women is being vigorously debated. Grant Allen records his observations now compared with 25 years ago, when he first went to France. He says:

"I was atruck by the extreme plainness of the French peasant girls, the visible anintelligence of the bourgeoise, and the mere sprightliness without real beauty of the upper-class women. In England, judged by American standards, I thought the women of the lower classes heavy and dumpy, of the middle classes often dull looking, though frequently pretty; of the sad manne dumpy, of the middle classes often dull looking, though frequently pretty; of the upper classes cold, but handsome.

"After 25 years I see little change in France, but much change in England.
Beauty, to my eye, is distinctly more frequent. Intelligent beauty is immensely commoner. Bright, pretty girls now abound here and there in the lower class. The upper class remains much where it was, but in the middle classes the improvement is unspeakable. Prettiness is general, and real beauty is much more frequent than formerly. Girls are better grown, have finer figures, look much more intelligent and possess better-chiceled features on an average than their mothers."

Of five corpses placed one behind the other at a distance of 1,800 feet three were pierced by one bullet. The wounds made in the soft tissue were smaller than those caused by the arms last used in warfare, but the bones struck by the bullets were splintered and arteries were cut so completely that stoppage of hemorrhage would be almost impossible.

has seized many Englishmen who believe the coming spring will see Great Britain at war with one or more great powers. The prophets of war profess to believe that Russia and France will take advantage of any provocation to draw the sword against England and will seek to crush her by a series of sud-len blows before Germany or the Triple Alliance can find an excuse for joining in the melee.

Two years hence the ex-Secretary of the American Navy, Gen. Tracy, argued, in an interview here, the British navy will be vastly inferior to the French-Russian fleet. The true test of strength, he said, is battleships of the type built since 1875. England now has 29 of 307,520 tons, France and Russia 28 of 241,600 tons.
