The time which must elapse befor Legislature meets is now measure days. There is no longer doubt upon the Legislature, at the appro g session, will devolve the du eciding whether this colony shall the Dominion now, and upon terms. Jo It is scarcely less certain there will be a majority vote car union. Yet, notwithstanding the i nence of the greatest political eve the history of the colony, an e which, whether for good or for ill, not fail to project its influences ver into futurity, is it not wonderf mark the degree of unreadiness pervades the public mind? It tion of union itself public opinion i extremely important matter of c tions is concerned, there has really no expression of opinion on the pa the public beyond what may have evolved in the course of newspaper cussion. When one reflects that federation is not necessarily good that it must in a very great me rest with the conditions to rende change beneficial or otherwise, thi athy regarding the most vital pa able. Were public sentiment indiff about the question itself, and soli about the conditions of that paion. would really be more reason in the dox; for it is plain that, while un our inevitable destiny, the cond may, to a great extent, be good of according as the people make We confess that we are at a loss count for this fatal indifference a matter of such profound impor It has been said that public opinio political matters is dead-that series of misgovernment and pointments have completely cri out public opicion. This is don true to a certain extent. It is the evils of our illiberal and unr sentative eystem of government th has a tendency to produce political difference,—political death. Yet were not quite prepared to find public opinion in this colony had come so utterly dead as not to ra an emergency like the present— the people are not only called up accept political manumission, but it to state their terms. To no part of United Colony does the question terms involve such serious conseques to Victoria. There are so things she wants, and which she co well do with ut, yet which must be ed for in order to be obtained. as the Mainland is concerned, the ditions are few, and most of them naturally auggest themselves-w fact, almost come as a matter of For respectable government there in all probability, have to be s struggle; but the construction o tial part of Confederation, must cessity be pushed forward with all sible speed, whether it be made a lated condition or not. With Victor care is, however, very diff. The whole colony is interested in steam communication; but Vi more. The whole colony is interin such fi-cal changes as will enato become the commercial a a ma centre for the North Pacific; fait toria more. The whole colony is ested in having the British naval in the Pacific stationed here; but toria more. The whole colony is ested in having its chief city place possession of those convenience appliances essential to enable it position at once creditable to itse to the Dominion; but Victoria. Now, while Victoria is the most in ed it is the most unready. It is i sented in the Legislative Council gentlemen who still appear to co it to be their mission to offer Confe tion an unconditional opposition, who will not even condescend to about terms. While it is true the gen lemen were, to some extent, e because they were opposed to Con ation, yet it should be remembere there was opposed to them a very British minerity; nor should the lost sight of that the position whole question has undergone great change since that election extremely questionable whether elarge minority would now worse for conditional opponents of the measure, whatever difference of opponents may still exist in this community the desirability of Coulederation, safely be asserted that there are indeed who do not regard the c as inevitable, It is, therefore, of to be the desire of all to dilligent sider the terms which would rend
