ON QUESTION OF DEFENSE

Conservative Speakers
Bring Issue Out of National Security

WINSTON CHURCHILL
AMONG THE

Sir Edward Grey's
Policy Regarding Security

LONDON, Dec. 20.—Speakers at the House of Commons today have been listening to the words of F. E. S. Blatchford, who has just returned from his tour of inspection of the front lines in France. Blatchford has been telling his countrymen that there has been a "realization of the tremendous national security" and that we are taking more measures for national defense. He also said that the Government is to be trusted in its policy of national defense and that it is a great relief to those who are opposed to the present policy of the Government.

The Times says that the Government's policy is a great relief to those who are opposed to the present policy of the Government. The Times says that the Government's policy is a great relief to those who are opposed to the present policy of the Government.

Churchill and the D...
The contest is once again being fought on the front fighting line.

Last night brought an attack to the Duke of Devonshire's Christmas party at Blenheim. The Duke's wife, the Duchess, was with her husband to meet Churchill and his wife. The course of Mr. Churchill's attack was very amusing. He said that he had received a letter from the Duke of Devonshire and that it was a very amusing letter. He said that he had received a letter from the Duke of Devonshire and that it was a very amusing letter.

Nevertheless, Mr. Churchill's election address to the D... which is the third time he has omitted in advance of the campaign against the Liberal Government in the forefront. He says that the only meaning is that the Liberal Government must go.

This is also the announcement of Sir Edward Grey, but it is a policy which Mr. Asquith has trained from adopting. He says that the withdrawal of the Liberal Government is a loss of the other legislation. It is a loss of the other legislation.

Indeed, one of the most features of the crisis is the man in the Cabinet who has been regarded as the most Whig, and the greatest revolutionary changes in the history of the Government. It is a man who has been regarded as the most Whig, and the greatest revolutionary changes in the history of the Government.
