glect of Duty-Another Deputation. The citizens morality committee does not by any means intend to weaken in its agitation for the suppression of the social evil. It held a meeting at Shaftesbury hall yesterday afternoon and answered the minute of the police commissioners sharply and well. Rev. Dr. Reid presided. Rev. Mr. Burton, after prayer acted as secretary. Rev John Smith read the commissioners document. The county attorney was then called on but Mr. Fenton had nothing to say, having answered the board in his published letter. Dr. Caven, after characterizing Mr. Fenton's criticism as fair and good, read the following document he had prepared in reply to the commissioners.

THE REPLY. It is regretted that this document (the commissioners) gives so great prominence to the matter of the county attorney's consistency in his relation to efforts for suppressing the social evil. Mr. Fenton is ing valuable service in the movement which is now being made and he is well able we do not doubt to justify his previous conduct, but we cannot allow the ind to be diverted from the imporpublic mind to be diverted from the important object to which our endeavors are directed by any irrelevant issue. A great evil confessedly exists among us to an alarming extent, and the question of duty is whether extent and the question of duty is whether extent and the property of the property of the world of the impossible by a zealous though judicious use of the police force to do anything farther in purging the city of a FOUL PESTILENCE ? The experience of other places seems to show the opposite.

The deputations who waited upon the The deputations who waited upon the commissioners and upon the mayor have not asked that suspected houses should be indiscriminately raided or that any steps of doubtful legality should be taken for their doubtful legality should be taken for their suppression. The case adduced by the commissioners in which a constable was stabled while making an arrest, and in which resistance was held by the court of essize to be justifiable was one in which by confession a warrant had been issued in improper form. Had sufficient information been procured to enable the issuing of a proper warrant the result would have been different. Surely such information could be procured before

There should moreover be no hesitation in aforcing the law against houses of ill-fame as such, and not merely when some other offence is committed in connection with Until this view is unhesitatingly will be as much smoke as ever.

It is therefore deemed proper to

In order to obviate all misconception to the character of this movement and the pirit by which its promoters are actuated we judge it well to declare that in our desire to have the law enforced against houses of prostitution, compassion for the victims of this sin is not forgotten, nor do we place of this sin is not forgotten, nor do we place undue reliance upon remedial measures of a purely legal nature. The action already adopted by us looking to the benefit of the asylums, provided for the fallen, should be accepted as evidence. Indeed we may without presumption affirm that those who are cordially with us in these measures are the same persons who sustain all benevolent

RECLAIMING THE ERRING and restoring them to society. But we re-pudiate and denounce as immoral and wicked the view that by refraining from enforcing the law against this great and terrible vice we are showing kindness either to its victims or to the community.

In saying this we desire to express concurrence in the opinion that the patrons of the houses in question are very generally entitled to severer reprobation than the inmates and that the penalties of the law should certainly be visited upon them and perhaps made heavier.

The discussion that ensued showed that the committee was determined to proceed the discussion that ensued showed that the committee was determined to proceed with its good work, notwithstanding the lukewarmness of the authorities. Mr. Fenton hardly approved of the legal criticism in the second paragraph, but it was allowed to stand with the following words added after "improper form": for which the magistrate issuing it ought to bear some responsibility. Mr. Thompson suggested they should form a vigilance league buffith idea was repudiated as bearing too much resemblance to the mode of doing things on the other side. Rev. Mr.

The colonel, who has as much swashuckler about him as had Pistol in Henry V., requested to see "the editor of this paper." That worthy party appeared in bis fighting shirt of blue and faced the gallant soldier from Jersey.

The colonel was told that the editor alone was responsible, that if Mr. Collier thought an injustice had been done him, a statement from him would be published. Further, if he thought it was a libel, as he claimed, he was told that he surely knew how to get reparation, but that his insinuations and threats would not be listened to.

ANNUAL REPORT.

Secretary Hill read the report of the directors for 1881. It congratulated the association on the success that attended the exhibition last year. The receipts from all sources were $47,805.19, and the tatement showed a net profit of $2,100.45 statement showed a net profit of $2,100.45. With a view to an effort being made to give greater satisfaction in the awarding of prizes the directors recommend to their successors a reduction in the number of udges, and that the amount paid for udges fees be devoted to the payment at nable rates for the services who are thoroughly practical men and well qualified to act in the capacity of a judge.

PUBLIC INTEREST IN THE SUCCESS of the exhibition is rapidly spreading, and as its promoters have now, after a trial of as its promoters have now, after a trial of three years, placed it on a satisfactory foot-ing, the directors are of opinion that a wider representation should be given on the association, and with this object in view they recommend that the president and secretary of all the county agricultural so-cieties in the counties of York, Ontario, Peal and Cardwell—being the counties com-Peel and Cardwell—being the counties com-prised within this agricultural district—be henceforth full members of this association and entitled to all the privileges thereof.

It has been decided that the exhibition for the present year will be held from the 11th to the 23rd September, the formal opening to take place on the 13th or 14th Septem-

The report having been accepted, Mr. Withrow made a few remarks respecting the standing of the association. In view

CERTAIN HARD THINGS that had been said about the association he thought it only proper and not boastful to say that the association was the most important and largest prize-giving body in the Dominion. He had examined the reports and statements of other associations and knew whereof he spoke. The prospects of the association were bright, but it prospects realities. The continued success of the association entirely depended on the efforts of the members. They had no government grant and had to find their resources themselves.

The new Yorkville poultry association applied for representation, and it was decided to allow it one representative after this year, in order to provide for which the Toronto pet stock association was deprived

UARPENTERS' WAGES.

The operative carpenters and joiners of the city discussed the wages question at Dufferin hall, last night. It was reported that no replies had yet been received from their employers to the request of the men for an advance of 5 cents an hour in wages. The employers have to March 1 to giv heir answer. The action of Withrow & Hillock and their system of dealing with the men working on refrigerators were de-lared unworthy of the confidence of car-penters and joiners, and the meeting ad-vised all good men to abstain from seeking employment at their shop until further

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

Another very large audience was present at the Grand last night to witness the sec-ond representation of The World, under the management of Brooks and Dickson. The success of the piece depends mainly on the scene effects, which are superb, equa ling anything ever produced on a Toronto stage. The raft scene is a grand piece of stage illusion. The elevator moving up and down, carrying passengers from one floor to another, and the explosion of the infernal machine, are well worth witnessing. The piece will run for the rest of the week with an extra matinee this afternoon.
