rador, which is part of the lattel dominion, bids fair to be settled al a comparatively early date. For years the two dominions have been disputing not only as to the boundaries of this desolate land, but as to the method by which the dis-pute should be settled. It was only, however, after the extension of the boundaries of the Province of Que bee, some years ago, that the con-troversy became really acute. That province now claims jurisdiction over a much larger section to the north of the peninsula than Newfoundland is willing to concede, the latter claiming the country at the head-waters of the rivers which find their outlet on the Labrador coast.

Since the Quebec Government scored jurisdiction over the extended territory to the north, there have been numerous clashes between the been numerous clashes between the two Governments in the matters of grants of timber, limited mineral rights, and so forth. In spite of the fact that the country is generally re-cognized to be desolate in character, it is stated that it is rich in timber, minerals, fish, and fur. Canada and Newfoundland have now decided to submit the dispute to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in England. They have also decided upon the form of the life and marauding exploits of the James boys and the Younger brothers, none has made known the hiding-place of the large amount of treasure these bandits succeeded in gathering together. A great part of the loot of this gang is said to be hidden in the Arbuckle mountains, a short distance from Oklahoma City. Buried beneath the Oklahoma City. Burled beneath the shifting surface of the mountain-side are said to be many thousands of dollars, the fruits of the alleged bank raids by the gang in the days following the American Civil War. The intrepid Missouri bandits led their bands of border "long-raiders" through five states, robbing banks their bands of border "long-raiders" through five states, robbing banks and holding up trains at will, return-ing after each raid to the hiding-place offered in the hills and moun-tains of the eastern and southern sections of the old Indian territory. In time the ceaseless trailing of the James boys resulted in the alleg-ed assassingation of Jesse James by the James boys resulted in the alteg-ed assassination of Jesse James by Bob Ford, renegade member of the gang, and the ultimate surrender of Frank James to Governor Thomas T. Crittendea, of Missouri. Accompan-ied by Major John N. Edwards, at that time the greatest editorial writer in the central west. Frank surrender-ed to Governor Crittenden and was let go on parole with Major Edwards, the governor accepting his personal let go on parole with Major Edwards, the governor accepting his personal word that he would appear before the Cooper County Circuit Court at its next convocation. He was there to stand trial for the Otterville and oth-er train robberies, or, in the event of a continuance, to furnish such a bond as the court might order. When court was convened and

Treasure Trove of Outlaws F the many thrilling stories that have been told of the

When sourt was convened and the first case was called against the noted defendant, the state an-nounced "Not ready," and the bond was fired. At this point in the trial many men in the district showed their friendship in an unstinted manner. Not one, nor two, nor a dozen, but almost a hundred wealthy Missourians, each a sur-rivor of the "Lost Cause," each either a member of the Marmaduke Brigade, one of Donavan's men, or a wild rider with Quantrell, vied with each other to affix their names, each name representing tens of the man who had worn the tens of thousands of dollars, to the bond of the man who had worn the uniform of Confederate gray during the troublesome period of the Civil War, when Missouri had been a "bor-der state," the scene of four years of bitter partisan warfare. Frank James returned to peaceful pursuits and avocations during the days which followed his surrender and while he was out upon what may be styled a "Perennia!" bond, while cases of the "States of Missouri vs. Frank James," cases which never came to trial but were continued from "term

Have Railways Fight Swindlers ISCUSSING the recent arrests of sleeping car conductors charged with accepting money from passengers for fares and not turning this in western railway official made the following statement: "Frequent arrests of sleeping car and train conductors by railway companies in which fraud against company is exposed always brings a certain amount of adverse criticism, the generally expressed opinion being that 'it is not fair to the employes to expose them to the temptation of detectives,' generally known as spotters, who are popularly supposed to board the trains and offer the conductor an amount smaller than the regular fare to be carried between certain points.

"Recently telegraphic despatches appeared in Milwaukee and Chicago appeared in Milwaukee and Chicago papers to the effect that 'further ar-rests and disclosures were promised for to-day in an-alleged $75,000 swindle whereby the Chicago, North Shore and Milwaukee electric road was the victim.' "One of the men arrested is the manager of a film aspace another

"One of the men arrested is the manager of a film agency, another a film salesman and the third a con-ductor. The mode by which this swindle was conducted is an old one; the conductor simply neglected to punch the tickets collected by him and turned them over to a syndicate of his friends who in turn resold them to friends at reduced reter them to friends at reduced rates. "Only a short time ago a conductor on a Canadian railway was dismissed from the service for a swindle of the same kind. It took no spotters nor experienced detectives to catch this man. / A clerk in one of the departmans. A clerk in one of the depart ments of the company applied to his principal for a reduced rate to a point about one hundred miles dis-tant. As the clerk had been in the employ of the company only four months he was not entitled, under the rules to a reduced rate and was months he was not entitled, under the rules, to a reduced rate and was told this by the head of the depart-ment. He (the clerk) remarked, 'Oh, that's all right; I can get it through my aunt.' Naturally the head of the department began to think. He won-dered who was this aunt that she could break down the rules of the com-ment on with supresent ease. He recould break down the rules of the com-pany and with apparent ease. He re-ported the circumstances to his su-perior officer who in turn made a report to the ticket auditing depart-ment. It was easily found out that the clerk boarded with his aunt as did also the train conductor on the sup batween these two points. The and also the fram conductor of the run between those two points. The aunt was asked to come to the office of the auditor and at once confessed that she had been the broker be-tween the conductor and friends of hers whom she could trust. It took no spotters nor detectives for that

In order that the Department of Immigration and Colonization may have at its command authentic acful settlers in various parts of Can-ada, it has been decided to offer cash prizes for letters or articles not exceeding 2,000 words, written by set-tlers in each of the nine Canadian provinces. The articles will be judged by a committee to be appointed by Hon, J. A. Calder, Minister of Immi-gration and Colonization, and should be mailed not later than February 14. 1920, to the Directof of Publicity for the Department. Three cash prizes will be given, one of $75, one of $50 and one of $25, in each of the nine provinces. It is explained that the competition is not a literary contest, the official announcement stating that "literary style, correct spelling, etc., will not be considered essential. Tell your story in your words." It is believed that the procuring of a number of graphic and truthful stories of how success has been won from the soil in all parts of the Dominion will do much to contribute to a future move-ment to Canada of the right class of settlers. provinces.

hiding place of the gold and silver buried years before in a case in the Arbuckles. Following the Blue Cut robbery, Jesse and Frank James drifted back to the Indian territory to a rendez-vous in the hills of the beautiful traner's Falls, one of the most fas-cinating scenic spots in all that sec-tion. While they were in temporary retirement they buried the fruits of their raids in a natural cave, near ite base of one of the mountains composing the Arbuckle chain. The mouth of the cave was walled up with masonry and dirt and bluff de-bris, avalanched systematically over the masonry in such a way as to con-ceal it from the eye of casual observ-ation. Information gleaned from per-sonal friends of the Missouri out-laws, says that the passing years, which had brought additional wrin-kles to the facces and sprinkled with silver the heads of the former "long of the mountain side within which was hidden. This went for two weeks and one day the man said, 'I don't intend to pay you two-fifty any more. Here is one-fifty.' The conductor de-murred but the man told him he could either take that or nothing. He took it. That price was paid for two trips, then one dollar, then fifty cents and then the crowning of it all came when a cigar was tendered. The conductor said, 'This has gone too far now. You can pay full fare or get off.' "Get off, will I. You put me off and see what will happen to you.'
