

where the neighbouring peasantry and farmers will be practically taught those lessons indispensable in our present social condition to the maintenance of the population. This model farm, with which an agricultural seminary and museum will be joined, will be superintended by Dr. Bewley of Moate, a gentleman who to great practical skill as an agriculturist joins intimate knowledge of the habits of the people. The doctor is at present on a tour through the best cultivated districts of England and Scotland, in order to become acquainted with the methods of improvement. He will be stimulated to develop the full advantages of the new institution by a salary of £300 a year, besides half the profits of the farm.

ECONOMICAL BREAD.—The Rev. Mr. Haggitt, of Durham, England, has stated a successful experiment for saving the consumption of flour in making bread. Mr. Haggitt gives the following account of the process: I took five pounds of bran, boiled it, and with liquor strained from it, kneaded fifty-six pounds of flour, adding the usual quantity of salt and yeast. When the dough was sufficiently risen it was weighed and divided into loaves; the weight before it was put into the oven being ninety-three pounds thirteen ounces, or about eight pounds ten ounces more than the same quantity of flour kneaded in the common way. It was then baked two hours, and some time after being drawn, the bread was weighed, and gave eighty-three pounds and eight ounces—loss in baking, ten pounds and five ounces. The same quantity of flour kneaded with common water loses about fifteen pounds ten ounces in the baking, and produces only sixty-nine pounds and eight ounces of bread; gain by my method fourteen pounds, that is, a clear increase of one-fifth of the usual quantity of bread from a given quantity of flour. He also states that the bran, after being used in this way, is equally fit for many domestic purposes.—[N. E. Farmer.]
