

THIS will likely be the largest Assembly since the Union. The Jesuit Question is looming large and dark above the horizon, and is the greatest sign in the heavens.

THIS reminds us of the great service Principal Caven is rendering to the country at this crisis. We would have little hope in the present anti-Jesuit agitation were it not that he is at the helm. A man who knows what he says and who never says anything that he has to take back—what an influence he wields! Let young men make a note.

J. MCP. SCOTT and M. P. TALLING are at present in Britain. Scott is on the search for some of the physical energy lost in the always vain attempt to combine a college course with the superintendence of a city mission. Experience teaches—men who are afterwards wise.

JUST as we go to press several clerical, legal and political gentlemen are bending "stubborn knees" to receive the highest mark of distinction which the Provincial University can bestow, and to hear the charmed words which give a man the right to sign himself LL.D., and look distinguished.

WE cannot come near University matters just now without running up against a crowd of angry undergraduates who are vigorously protesting against some or all of the examiners. Their complaints sound familiar, as though we had heard them at least ten years ago. There used to be students and examiners who took different views of certain important questions. Similar differences of opinion seem to exist to-day.

SEVERAL students, whose names stand high in the honor lists, have submitted certain examination papers for the consideration of Here and Away, and challenged us to extract any meaning from several questions, even with the aid of a derrick. Having revised several acres of printer's copy, we had grown familiar with "words without knowledge," and accustomed to the editor's work of "making bricks without straw," but we had to confess, after much mental wrestling, that the examiner's brain-twisters baffled us. Indeed we feel tempted to collate a few of these University riddles, belonging to this and past years, and make "philosophical conundrums" a feature of this Department.

WE would like to call the attention of ministers especially to the liberal offer made by the publisher of the MONTHLY, of the Expositor (edited by Rev. W. Robertson Nicoll, M.A., and published by Hodder & Stoughton, London), and the MONTHLY for $3 50, the subscription price of the Expositor alone. We are all the more pleased with this arrangement that it is calculated to introduce the Expositor to a large number of our Canadian ministers who would enjoy reading it. It is by far the best religious magazine published in Britain. Indeed nothing else can stand against it.

REV. DR. KELLOGG, of Toronto, has been selected to write the commentary on Leviticus for the Expositor's Bible series now being published by Hodder & Stoughton. It will be some time yet before this volume appears, but we are satisfied it will be one of the strongest of this exceedingly strong series. It will help to keep the balance even against Dods' Genesis and Smith's Isaiah, and will be a credit to our Canadian Church. Of all this we are sure beforehand.
