

(i) research studies for application to problems in international negotiations; (ii) specialized technical training programmes; (iii) hosting of international symposia of experts on specific subjects; (iv) liaison with national and international bodies outside of Canada engaged in verification issues; and (v) public presentation of verification issues.

In sharing the results of our work with the international community, we hope to contribute to easing the political and security concerns and overcoming the lack of confidence that have kept nations divided.