called by the French Fort la Tour, which was once a Place of fome Strength, and capable of making a good Defence. The Land near the Coaft is rocky, and has no inviting Afpect for new Settlers.

Thirty Leagues S. É. from Cape Sable lies Port la Heve, on the South Coaft. The Entrance into it is formed by the Point of an Ifland called Round Ifland, on the Weft, and a narrow Peninfular Promontory on the Eaft, and is about a Quarter of a League acrofs. From the Entrance the Harbour immediately bends to the Weft, fpreading about half a League in Breadth to twice that Length. This Bend fecures it againft Wind and Weather, and there is good Anchorage every where from twenty Fathom to four.

On the North Side lies the River La Heve, which extending its Channel North Weft with a Quarter of a Mile in Width, is navigable by large Ships twelve Miles into the Country. Upon a Point of Land form'd by the Bend of the River, near its Mouth, ftands the Block-houfe, with fome Indian Habitations not far from it, and a fine Pond of fresh Water close to it. Opposite to this, on the other Side of the River, is a curious Bed of fine Oysters, which are of an excelent Flavour, and the best in this Country. Not far from this, to the Northward, lies another anoth have Harbo from genera vince. fended Entra is efte

Th bout f and j of Situ nearer munic the w inferio only t pofed not for rich l aptly to be

> A of th Port The in Le and l anche