HYDRO-ELECTRIC POWER.

Mr. W. K. McNaught was justified in calling attention to the importance of hydro-electric power to Ontario, and alized much sooner than most people peak load. Taking care of the peak load is the big problem in all electric development. The peak load in cities is usually greatest in the afternoons from three till seven, especially in winter. But the day load is greater than the night load. Under electric operation the freight trains would be run at night, "off the peak," on power that would otherwise be wasted, and the reduction in cost would justify the scrapping of a lot of steam locomotives. The excellent service rendered by the electric locomotives at the Sarnia tunnel shows what can be done. Another point that will appeal to the traveling public would be the better ventilation and temperature conditions maintainable more easily with electric heating than with steam. With steam heat there is only one temperature posthe passengers get it and are roasted. When it is turned off they are frozen. With electric heat the temperature can be graduated.

The future for electric power in Ontario is practically limitless and the conservation of the water powers of a necessity for the welfare of the community.

The Laurier government could have settled the matter on terms of compromise some years ago, but declined to do so. It remains to be seen whether a compromise, honorable to both parties, may not yet be adopted.

We do not think the electors of On tario are likely to be moved by merely whimsical conditions of this character. Beyond Chairman Leitch and the Ontario Railway Board, there is very little in the way of sins of commis to be found in Sir James' record. Of sins of emission a greater list might perhaps be prepared. But in cases of ission there is always the point of opportunity to be considered. And if that be taken into consideration, then the question is whether Sir James' record, with its rich achievement, warrants further opportunity to carry out those things he has not yet had the time to bring to pass.

Imperialists Better Drilled.

The foreign settlements suffered heavily. A Hankow consular report says it was a foregone conclusion that the imperialists would win if they attacked seriously, because of their superior organization. During the attack every position the rebels assumed was heavily shelled. The imperialists numbered probably 30,000 modern drilled men. The rebels were for the most part volunteers, perhaps equal in number to the imperial forces.

A. A. Minaker said the association had important work to do as the condition of Erie Terrace was likely to cause an epidemic in the spring unless vigorous work was done which might wipe out half the population. It should cost for the subway. Ninety-five per cent. of the residents of this locality favored Ashdale-avenue. It would cost far less and accommodate more people. It was very peculiar how the aldermen had at first favored Ashdale avenue but had been mysterfously induced to change over in favor of Cox-counsel, at noon yesterday, and the services of E. E. A. Du Vernet, K. C., were secured.
