Cartoonists in the United States are depicting Canada as a bad-tempered generally $2 per cwt. less. child throwing bricks at the portly The record day for sheep and lambs But it would be a great mistake to regard Canadian feeling at the present time as a mere fit of bad temper. It will be found that there has been a very perceptible growth in sound-healthy Canadian sentiment. Apart from the territorial question, there is a feeling of satisfaction that the Canadian jurists had character and backbone enough not to be overawed by Lord Alverstone and the Americans, or to be coaxed away from their duty by the blandishments that London so.

whether they want to go to war with the United States. Some very difficult problems have been solved in Canada as they could not have been solved by weak, peevish or foolish people. Canadians solved the problem of colonial self-government without separation. They have settled a race question which in the hands of weak and passionate people might easily have led to a race appearance the hateful Sunday paper or the latest sellow back. Nor is it indolent desire pointments, have been turned to good account. We are told that Deadlock was the father of Confederation. There is nothing discreditable in the admission that confederation did spring from deadlock. From the defects of the old legislative union, from the defects of the old legislative union, from the dangers incident to race and sectional jealousies and from the desire for expansion. We made our instrument of government more elastic that it might bind all Canada from sea to sea. It is true also that a strong impulse was given to confederation by the abrogation of the reciprocity treaty by the United Stafes. There is a good deal of strength in a national character to which loss and difficulty and sense of injury are incentives to nation-building.

We believe, therefore, that the Pacific coast award will leave its mark, and that its permanent result will be a powerful impulse do Canadian sentiment. Many things have happened to strengthe that sentiment in recent years, including the immense expansion of our trade and the rapid flow of settlers into the Canadian west, we are now discovering in the Canadian dear the means of assimilating all the elements of our population. It is as good deal of the canadian dear the means of assimilating all the elements of our population. It is as good deal to the rapid flow of settlers into the Canadian west, we are now discovering in the Canadian west, we are now discovering in the Canadian west, we are now discovering in the Canadian west, we called themselves French-Canadians. they called themselves French-Canadians. The prompt answer was that they did not. The man of French descent in Canada calls himself a Canadian, and wants no other description. Others have bestowed on him the addition, "French." We shall find in the name Canadian and the ideas that gather about it the means of assimilating the settlers from the United States who owned by corporations and political class and their motive may be recountry. We have solved some diffi-cult problems of government but we cannot congratulate ourselves on our dealings with corporations and moneyed interests, and we may lose more here than by mistakes in diplomacy. Young Canada, which is making itself heard ow, will find a great field here for who is on the house-top not atriotic work.

THE SHEEP AND CATTLE TRADE. in the annals of the live stock in-dustry centring around Toronto. The to-tal number of cattle was 22,503, an incrgase of 5700, over the corresponding time last year, and the increase is slightly over 33 per cent. for the month. This is an inkling of the possibilities of the Canadian cattle trade, From this number fully 12,000 have gone into the distillery byres and farmers' feed ture hat would entail too severe a punstalls to come again upon our market ishment even if it did exactly fit the for sale for export and home consump- crime.

New York, Nov. 1.-The Tribune's

New York, Nov. I.—The Tribune's cable says: Wales is temporarily prominent today in British politics, for Sir William Vernon Harcourt, who has been Mr. Chamberlain's chief opponent in recent years, is delivering a flerce onslaught upon the new fiscal policies; but Ireland in, reality holds the field. The new Land Act goes into effect tomorrow, and the Duke of Leinster and many other peers will sell immense estates to their tenants and receive lavish bonuses from the State Treasury. This agrarian revolution is one of the most complex transactions of recent times, but it does not relieve parliament from the necessity of taking up fresh legislation for Ireland. The Nationalists have already received assurances that a bill for the endowment of a Roman Catholic university will be introduced in the spring. Their, support must be obtained even if the Nonconformists are already exasperated by the Education Act; otherwise there will be no time for Mr. Chamberlain's missionary enterprise.
