

WINNIPEG IS GOING TOO FAST REAL ESTATE IS BOUND TO FALL

Rev. I. B. Wallwin Returns From Trip to That City—His Impressions.

Rev. I. B. Wallwin, pastor of Em-press Avenue Methodist Church, has just returned from a month's vacation spent in the Northwest, including Winnipeg, Brandon, Regina, Calgary, Edmonton and some rural districts.

In an interview with an Advertiser reporter he said that the great west is bound to be all its many friends claim for it. It will have temporary checks, as from booms and frosts, but, like a running stream, will leap over all obstacles.

Great Progress.

Mr. Wallwin visited the above places, except Edmonton, eight years ago, and declares that the progress of the country since then has been phenomenal. At Calgary, on a part of the open prairie where eight years ago he played golf, there is now a fine residential district, closely packed with beautiful homes. All the chief cities have grown marvelously, and on the great stretch of prairie along the C. P. R., where there were no signs then of habitation, are now growing villages and towns, farm-houses and stacks of hay, horses and cattle, waving wheat, and oats.

The Crops.

The crops in parts of Southern Manitoba, he says, are spare, in some places very poor, chiefly on account of extended drought after seeding. The first rains of note occurred on his arrival, about three weeks ago, too late to save the situation. North and west of Brandon crops are good, as they are also in the great Regina plain, and also in the Edmonton district.

A Great Year.

This is a quiet year, comparatively, in the west, the crops being so late that the safe harvesting is uncertain, and the real estate boom of the cities having reached a head. The season is fully three weeks behind, harvesting, even in Manitoba, having only begun this week, while about Edmonton the grain ten days ago was as green as the grass. Superabundant rain, falling almost every other day for weeks, from Regina to Edmonton, has retarded the harvest, while on account of the late season, frost is now the bête noire. Two weeks ago a frost at the latter place did some damage, as also indeed in parts of Manitoba.

The real estate boom of the cities has ended, and while holders are steadily buying to maintain prices at high water mark, there is bound to be a serious fall. Mr. Wallwin was told that in Winnipeg there had been enough lots sold for a city of two million people. Probably that is an overstatement, he thinks, yet in all the chief cities property will not further advance in price for at least five years. Regina is bound to be a beautiful city, with its splendid public buildings and the magnificent streets it is laying out and constructing in permanent form. Edmonton, with Strathcona on the opposite bank of the swift and mighty Saskatchewan, is the picturesque city of the west, grandly placed on the north bank of the river, on a high plateau, and commercially the gateway to the great country to the north and west, including the Peace River country.

Superb structures are being erected here—banking, mercantile, educational, religious, private and provincial. Edmonton has been well chosen as the seat of government, and Strathcona as the seat of the provincial university.

Mr. Wallwin took boat at Sarnia, and had a pleasant trip up the lakes, returning by the fine new steamer of the Northern Navigation Company, the Huron.

Rev. Dr. Ross Lays Down Principles For Capital and Labor to Follow

Preaches on Topics of Much Interest on Labor Day—Offers
Many Suggestions.

Labor Day topics were discussed in several city pulpits yesterday. Rev. Dr. Ross, pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, preached on the Church's attitude to the labor question in the light of the life and teaching of Jesus, the carpenter of Nazareth. On a day of this kind the world is talking of the dignity of labor, less dignified labor for he was a laborer himself. He knew the struggles and sorrows of the poor. He knew what it was to be without work. He knew how difficult it was to work for inadequate remuneration, and he knew days of enforced idleness. But all this did not sour his disposition. He ever kept sense of justice.

All Labor Honorable.

In the light of his teachings all labor is honorable. Laboring men were at one time looked down upon by their employers. That day has passed, and now the danger was the other way. The workingmen are liable to look down upon all others. The labor journals are calling the rich parasites, non-producers, and other names, not complimentary. There should be mutual respect. A man who has built up a large industry by patience and hard work is worthy of respect. He is a producer. A man that rescues another from a life of vice, and makes him an honest and worthy citizen has produced something. The man who saves a man from suicide or a woman from a life of shame is a producer and is worthy of respect.

At present there was not so much antagonism in Canada between capital and labor as in the United States, but as most all the labor organizations have their headquarters in the States there was always danger of imbibing that viewpoint, and he warned labor against that. The workingmen were the largest contributors to churchwork and they would always find the clergy sympathetic and helpful to them.

The Church and Labor.

There were two things that the church and labor organizations should work for—to preserve the sanctity of the Sabbath and the promotion of temperance. The liquor traffic was a great foe to the workingman and always has been. The open Sabbath was not in the interests of the worker. "Labor men should not condone wrongdoing because it was done by men on their side," declared Dr. Ross. "I found a journal the other day that defended the grafting of Mayor Schmitz, of San Francisco. The same journal defended the Western Federation of Miners, an organization composed of, as far as he could judge, of thugs. The acquittal of Haywood is acclaimed with much rejoicing, although no person can believe that he was entirely guiltless. The state was merely unfortunate in its witnesses. Such things as these bring discredit upon labor, and defame it."

Eight Principles.

Eight principles were laid down by Dr. Ross upon which the church ought to insist. The church should by no means take sides with either capital or labor, but preserve its neutrality, a mediator between the two factions. The principles were:

1.—Every man has the right to work for whom and for what wages he wishes. He ought not to be compelled to join a labor organization unless he sees that it is to his advantage to do so.

2.—Every employer of labor should be free to choose whatever laborer he wishes. There should be open shops.

3.—Compulsory arbitration should obtain. This principle is the right principle, especially where the interests of the community are at stake. Capital is capitalized, so should labor unions. The latter should not avoid their fair share of responsibility by avoiding incorporation.

4.—Every laborer should be paid the wages he earns, not the wages another man earns. A uniform scale of wages tends to encourage incompetence and laziness.

5.—Capital must recognize the right of labor to organize. It should not discriminate against a union man just because he is a union man no more than the union should discriminate in favor of a union man just because he is a union man.

6.—No man has the right to quit his job and hold on to it at the same time. He has no right to keep others from work. He should not use violence under any circumstances.

7.—The principle of boycott must be condemned.

8.—The golden rule should be applied to all questions relating to capital and labor. It is capable of being employed and would solve many of the difficulties now distressing both parties.

are those from surrounding places, like Woodstock, Guelph, etc., while several were noted to be from Hamilton and Toronto.

Transients Numerous.

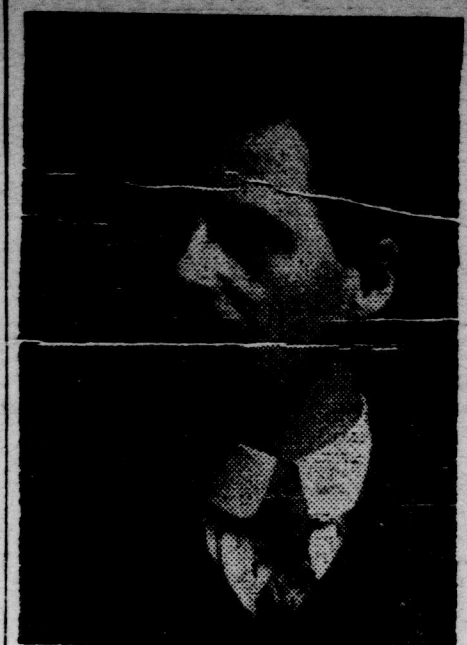

In other hotels the same story was heard. The number of transients registered was remarkable, and although the hotelmen were at a loss to explain the reason for the situation, it is needless to say that they weren't sorry it was so.

"As a rule, when we have outsiders registered here, they are traveling men," said one hotelkeeper. "Now it is different. Nearly all of those here at present seem to just be out for a good time, and that they have selected London as the most likely place to spend the great holiday reflects most favorably on the city as an amusement center."

BOOTH PLANS ANOTHER BIG TOUR

Head of the Salvation Army to Visit America This Autumn.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

London, Aug. 31.—Despite his 73 years, General Booth continues to display apparently inexhaustible vigor in the management of the Army. Although he only recently completed an extended motoring campaign in England, preaching in every town through which he passed, he is in excellent health and is eagerly anticipating a fresh autumnal campaign which he has planned for the United States and Canada. He will sail from Liverpool on September 13, and will be absent about eight weeks, during which he will travel some 8,000 miles and make addresses at upwards of a hundred meetings. He will hold numerous conferences with the Army for the purpose of extending the work in America.

DROPPED DEAD IN HOTEL ROOM

London and after spending a couple of years in this city, he returned to Ireland in 1859, and brought back with him his bride.

Over Half a Century.

In all he had been about 54 years in this country, and all his business efforts proved successful. He was for a long time the proprietor of the Huron Hotel, and later in 1880, he built the Dominion House, corner of Clarence and York streets, which is now conducted by Mr. John Cox. In 1897 he assumed control of the Grigg House, and to the traveling public the house has been known as one of the best conducted in Ontario. He was also largely interested in real estate, controlling large holdings in London.

For a year or more he had not resided at the hotel, but had lived at 172 Kent street, with his daughter, Mrs. Darcy, leaving the management of the hotel to his son, Mr. Michael O'Meara.

Mr. O'Meara was a member of the Catholic Mutual Benefit Association, and also of the Catholic Order of Foresters. His wife died in 1880, but he is survived by one son, Michael, and two daughters, Mrs. Darcy and Mrs. E. J. Ryan, of this city. A brother, Mr. Patrick O'Meara, lives in Chicago as does also a sister, Mrs. Hogan. Another sister is in a convent in St. Louis.

The funeral will be held on Tuesday morning to St. Peter's Cathedral, and thence to the Catholic cemetery.

SHELDON ON INTEMPERANCE

Says the English Are More Intemperate Than the Americans.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

London, Aug. 31.—The Rev. Charles Sheldon, author and reformer, of Topeka, Kansas, concluded his visit to England this week and sailed for New York today on the steamship St. Louis. Before he left he was presented with an illuminated address by the officers of the United Kingdom Alliance, as a token of gratitude for the lasting service he has rendered the cause of temperance reform in Great Britain. Rev. Mr. Sheldon in an interview said that the English are more intemperate than the Americans. Glasgow and Edinburgh are worse than London, while Durham is the most intemperate county in England.

AMERICAN HUMORISTS IGNORANT BUFFOONS

English Press Says Yankees Are Losing Sense of Humor.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

London, Aug. 31.—The English press has seized upon a Chicago professor's charge that Americans are losing their sense of humor in their pursuits of wealth and seems inclined to treat it as a true indictment. "There is certainly an absence of humor in their said and cruel comments," says the Graphic. "It certainly would not be true that their best jokes are made by their richest men, but the sardonic characteristic of American humor is not its disassociation from dollars, but rather its disassociation from culture. In England it is possible and not unusual for a man to be learned and yet to bubble over with fun. Matthew Arnold did so to such an extent that he was sometimes rebuked for flippancy. Andrew Lang furnishes a contemporary case in point. But in America it is otherwise. Humorists, amusing as one finds them, are mostly ignorant buffoons like Nye and Josh Billings. The men who have got hold of culture make it hum with the unimpeachable solemnity of a top."

VESUVIUS RESTLESS

Signs That Point to Another Violent Eruption.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Rome, Aug. 31.—Recent signs of greater activity of Vesuvius are beginning to cause alarm, especially to the inhabitants of Torre Annunziata, who fear that a violent eruption is about to occur. The Government has instructed the local authorities to take the necessary measures for the removal of the population if it becomes necessary. Telegrams from Catania report that Mount Etna is also more active than usual but the people are not alarmed.

FILTRATION IS OUT OF RUNNING that we would be obliged to settle with the three mills on the north branch.

River Will Decrease.

"I also fear in the years to come the river will not give the quantity of water it does today. My reason for saying this is that the farmers are constantly improving their drainage systems, so that rainfall, instead of taking months to filter through the earth to reach the river, will take a shorter and shorter time until a point is reached when the farm lands adjacent to the river will be drained in a few hours.

"It will, no doubt, be claimed by those advocating river filtration that even then there will be more water in the river than at Komoka, but we must bear in mind that the principal claim made by river advocates is that we will have abundance of water for all purposes.

Komoka Water.

"The commissioners do not claim that the Komoka waters will supply the city's needs for all time, but we do say that by adding these waters the citizens of London will enjoy the same palatable and refreshing spring water that we have been having since the present Springbank system was installed—a water that is the pride of most Londoners and is praised by all visitors who come within our borders, and will give us a supply for a city twice the present population."

MOROCCAN WAR

WILL TIRE FRANCE

Promise of Sultan to Foot All
Bills Not Likely To Be Carried Out.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Paris, Aug. 31.—The public has been reassured by the announcement that Morocco will be compelled to pay the expenses of all measures France may take for the subjugation of anarchy, and the protection of European interests in Casablanca and other points on the Moroccan coast. The public does not know it, but Morocco will never be able to pay a claim of such size as this one promises to amount to. Nobody has any idea what the next development of the situation will be, but France's task has already begun. The embarrassment over the rival claims of the two sultans is great. Mulai Hadid is the abler man. His personal sympathies with foreigners are friendly, but his followers are chiefly anti-European. France cannot enter into any agreement with him at present, for it would alienate his followers. Besides his claim to the throne is not yet established, and he is still technically a traitor.

On the other hand, Abdul Aziz is hopelessly weak as a ruler, and it is regarded as practically impossible that he can succeed in any circumstances in pacifying the country and retaining the throne. The question is how long the present condition of anarchy will be allowed to continue before foreign intervention of some sort becomes imperative. Premier Clemenceau has taken a middle course in deciding to send a sufficient force to Morocco to demonstrate to the most ignorant fanatics that the power exists to maintain the position, and to authorize the free use of this force within a reasonable distance of the base. The outlook from the French point of view is by no means cheerful, and there is every indication that France will become very tired of her Moroccan venture before it is finished.
