There is a reason for this: Ald. Winnett, in the council, moved himself and Ald. Stevely as members, where-upon Ald. Carrothers registered a vigorous kick at being excluded. So did Ald. Cooper and Ald. Dreaney. It looked as if the machine would break down completely. Consequently the mayor and Ald. [Special to The Advertiser.]

Ottawa, March 3.-A meeting of the railway committee of the privy council was held this forenoon to hear the application of the Bell Telephone Company of the Dominion, for an increase of their rates, on the ground that the company was operating under a loss. The ministers present were Messrs. Blair, Mulock, Tarte and Sir Henry Joly. Mr. Z. A. Lash, Q.C., represented the telephone company. He was accompanied by Mr. Sise, president of the company, Montreal, and Mr. Robt. Mackay, Montreal. Mayor Prefontaine and Messrs. Dupuis, Penny and Beau-soliel represented the city of Montreal. From Toronto there were Mayor Shaw, Counsel Fullerton, City Engineer Rush and Ald. McMurrich, Franklin and Sheppard, along with Elias Rogers, president of the board of trade, and Messrs. Scott and Ames. London was represented by Mayor Wilson and Aid. ney and Winnett. Ottawa was represented by Mayor Bingham, Ald. Black and R. J. Davidson, and the city solicitor. There were representatives also Nipissing Goes Liberal Beyond town in Ontario, protesting against the

He pointed out that there was nothing which had happened since the company had made its arrangements with the city of Toronto to warrant any increase to the company. In his opinion the people throughout the Dominion would oppose the request, which was not a Ald. Sheppard said that the increase -Mr. Henry Dunn, teamster, died which was demanded would mean at his home, 141 Ridout street, last $200,000 increase to the city of Toronto -that the company was doing a paying business was shown from the fact that the stock was selling at 174 per cent. He argued that the company was a monopoly, and showed that they had crushed out competition in Peterboro, and now were engaged in Detroit by giving a low price, which would not pay a telephone service, to crush out competition there. Just as soon as a competition was gone the price would be increased. The only clause that was left in their charter to guard the interests of the people was the one which was now being asked to be removed, namely, that which prevents them from increasing their rates. That the request was not a reasonable one was shown by the company being in a position to pay 10 per cent dividend, and have a rest account of $950,000 out of a capital of $3,000,000.

IN THE HOUSE OF LORDS. A Lendon correspondent writes: It was amusing to see the peers meet each other, and a little difficult for an ordinary individual to realize that they were peers as he watched them. Some of them dug each other in the ribs, just as pleasantly as though they were congressmen, and the Earl of Kimberley took the Marquis of Salisbury into the corner and told him some good story, judging by the way the premier rubbed his stomach with amusement. lord chancellor, having become an earl since the house last met, was, of course, an object of congratulation on all sides. He is a queer little figure, with a large head and a small body, and by the time he had got on his wig and put on his robes he looked a very ideal object for a Gaiety burlesque. I noticed that dukes and marquises as they shook hands with him and glanced at his extra robes of ermine, did it in a patronizing way, as much as to "You are coming near us, my good fellow, but of course you are in no near our exalted dignity." Earls shook the hand of the newly-made earl with an air of brotherhood and general welcome. One earl in particular pointed out that the trimming on the sleeve of the chancellor's new gown was not quite correct, and should be improved Viscounts and barons, on the other hand, seemed proud to know the chancellor, and to these the new earl was "affable, most affable," not to say
