

DUKE PRAISES WORK OF ORPHAN'S HOME

Protestant Institution Good for Country, Governor-
General Says.

General Says.

His excellency, the governor-general, the Duke of Devonshire, and the lieutenant-governor, the Hon. Lionel H. Clarke, attended the 69th anniversary of the Protestant Orphans' Home yesterday afternoon, where they made a tour of the building and watched the young inmates carry out some pretty children's dances.

In opening the meeting Mrs. F. E. Hodgins, who presided, said the occasion was one for which they were rejoicing, and stated that it was gratifying to her to see the children so happy.

They said that it was exceedingly kind of the governor general and the lieutenant-governor to come home, and the meeting would go down the history of the institution. Some information was given by the governor general that the subject they were discussing was the removal of the children to a place a few miles out into the country, so the children could breathe the pure air and enjoy the glories of the countryside. They also had in mind the formation of one or two companies of girl guides and to them it was a real letter day, to them it was a real letter day, and when he was a real letter day, and when his excellency if he would give them a photograph of himself to hang in the hall, and the Hon. Hodgins further added that the present two governors was a tremendous help and showed that they were taking a great interest in the work at the home. They now had 100 children.

Canada's Difficulties.
His excellency, who was received with loud cheers, said it gave him great pleasure to be among them, and see the splendid work being carried on. Nothing, he added, deserved more sympathy than the care of orphan children, and the committee were to be congratulated on the work they had achieved. They had done wonderful work. The people in Canada, he said, had their difficulties, but the country would surmount them. This work, he closed, was being done with the children, was of ren was for the good of Canada and the empire, and he was certain they would, after the care they were receiving, turn out good and noble citizens of this great land. The governor-general further asked that the children should have a special half-holiday in memory of the visit, and to show his appreciation of the work.

The whole tone of the home as seen by The World, was original, the children being brought up on up-to-date lines, while the atmosphere of the home showed that the children realized that they were in a real home, without some of the hardbound charity

Children's Neat Dress.
The dress of the children was the same as worn by children of citizens of average means, the boys being clad in smart striped shirts, with ties, knickers, woollen stockings and good strong boots, while the girls wore white jumpers and blue shirts, the tiny tots wearing jerseys and knickers.

Rev. Provost Macklem moved that the following ladies be elected as managers for the coming year: Mrs. James F. E. Hodgins, Darling, Kirkpatrick, Eaton, Schofield, Gooderham, Jarvis, Northey, O'Brian, Christie, L. McMurray, Howland, F. G. Osler, Bar-

Reluctance to Give Orders

For automobiles in England.

London, Nov. 9.—The annual motor show this year has overflowed Olympia to White City, but the exhibitors confess that, while the exhibits were never more inviting, there is a conspicuous reluctance to giving orders. It is generally agreed that the war profits are about exhausted and consequently folks reckoned wealthy are economizing.
