New York's verdict, "the one really big hit of the season," applied to "The Maid and the Mummy," has been retiterated in all the big cities in which Richard Carle's latest offering has been presented. The book and lyrics are by Richard Carle, and the music is by Mr. Bowers. The piece is filled with pretty music, bright sayings, ridiculous comedy situations, and lots of pretty girls, to say nothing of numberless dancers. The action of the first act takes place in an antique store kept by Washington Stubbs, an actor manager, who is selling his theatrical properties as verifying the second.
