SWEET AND NATURIAL MARY PICKFORD

MONG THE SIMPLE FISHER-FOLK OF A LITTLE ISLAND on the west coast of Scotland lives MacTavish, head of a clan. Here he rules as a chieftain should and his word is law to all those who go down to the sea in ships and the women and children who wait and watch on the ock-ribbed coast. One dreary day a hurricane sweeps across the Hebrides and the fishermen turn their boats to the inlet for shelter. On the shore the women and children watch the light of their men with the waves and wring their hands as some of the craft founder in the gale. Among those who wait is Marget MacTavish (Mary Pickford) who sees her father's hand about the pieces in the roaring surf. A party of men is Marget MacTavish (Mary Pickford) who sees her father's boat dashed to pieces in the roaring surf. A party of men headed by Jamie Campbell try to rescue the old chieftain but the waves close over him before they can reach the battling craft. With MacTavish lost, according to the law of the island, the succession of authority passes to his daughter Marget, just eighteen. Then the delightful story commences.

A story that will play upon your heart-strings, will make you smile, cry and do you good generally
