

What-Not.
I would not have Theo Young Again.
I would not have Theo Young again,
Since I myself an old;
Not that thy youth was ever vain,
Or that thy age is cold;
But when upon thy gentle face
I see the shades of time,
A thousand memories replace
The beauties of thy prime.
Though from thy eyes of softest blue,
Some light hath passed away,
Love looketh forth as warm and true
As on our bridal day.
I hear thy song, and though in part
'Tis fainter in its tone,
I heed it not, for still thy heart
Seems singing to my own.

Lord Byron, as is well known, was much galled by some severe satires made by Southey on his character and writings, and announced his intention of demanding "the satisfaction due to a gentleman."
For some reason the challenge was never sent, but, in anticipation of it, the Laureate prepared the following reply, which was found among his papers.
"Sir,—I have the honor of acknowledging the receipt of your letter, and do myself the pleasure of replying to it without delay.
"In affairs of this kind, the parties ought to meet upon equal terms. But to establish the equality between you and me, there are three things which ought to be done; and then a fourth is also necessary, before I can meet you on the field.
"First—You must marry, and have four children; please to be particular in having them all girls.
"Secondly—You must prove that the great part of the provision which you make for your dependents upon your life; and you must be under a bond of £1000 not to be hanged, not to commit suicide, and not to be killed in a duel—which are the conditions upon which I have effected an assurance of my own life for the benefit of my wife and four daughters.
"Thirdly—I must tell three direct falsehoods concerning you, upon the hustings, or in some other not less public assembly; and I shall neither be able to do this, nor to meet you afterward in the manner you propose, unless you can perform the fourth thing—which is—
"That you must convert me from the Christian religion.
"All this is to be accomplished, our dispute must be carried on without the use of any more iron than is necessary for blackening our ink and mending our pens; or any more lead than enters into the composition of the Edinburg Review. I have the honor to subscribe myself,
"Sir, yours, with all proper consideration,
"ROBERT SOUTHBY."

"One of our Maine young fellows, thus describes his battle, and final victory, in a fair fight for a kiss of his sweetheart:
"Ah, now, Sarah dear! I give you a kiss—just one—and be done with it."
"I won't do so, these now."
"Then I'll have to take it, whether or no."
"Take it if you dare!"
"So at it we went, rough and tumble—An awful destruction of starch now commenced. The bow of my cravat was squab in half of no time. And the next bout, smash went shirt-collar, and at the same time some of the head-fastenings gave way, and down came Sally's hair like a flood in a mill-dam broke loose, carrying away half a dozen combs. One plunge of Sally's elbow, and my blooming bosom-ruffles wilted to the consistency and form of an after-dinner napkin. But she had no time to boast—Soon her neck-tackling began to shiver, parted at the throat, and they went a string of white heads, scuppering and running the traces every way you could think of about the floor. She fought fair, however, I must admit; and when she could fight no longer, for the want of breath, she yielded handsomely; her arms fell down by her side—those long, round, rosy arms—her hair hung back over the chair, her eyes were half shut, as if she were not able to hold them open a minute longer, and there lay a little plump mouth all in the air! My goodness! Did you ever see a hawk pounce on a robin? or a bee on a clover-top? Even so I settled; and when she came to, and threw up those arms and seized me around the neck, and declared she would choke me if I gave did so again, and had a great mind to do it, I just ran the risk over again, and the more she choked me the more I liked it; and when she put her arms around my neck, and calls me her John, and don't seem to make any fuss about it at all. That was a very sensible girl, and she makes a good wife too, as I am not ashamed to say anywhere."
BITTER AND SWEET.—Lady Wootley Montague, the famous wit and beauty, made the most sarcastic observation that was ever published about her own sex. "It goes far," she said, "to reconcile me to being a woman, when I reflect that I am thus in no danger of ever marrying one!"
"What if a man had said that? But as an effect we give the remark of Lola Montez. In one of her lectures she said:
"I never beheld a beautiful woman, but I fall in love with her myself, and wish I were a man that I might marry her."
