GALLANT LITTLE JAPS.

Drift Thirty Miles Down Fraser on an Upturned Boat.

After having drifted all night on the bottom of an upturned fishing boat, during which time, perished with cold, which took right hold of their bones and paralyzed them, two Japanese fishermen were picked up yesterday morning just as the day broke, by a couple of the employees of the Fraser River mills, says the New Westminster News. The plucky little brown men had to be helped into the boat by their rescuers, but as soon as they had secured their upturned skiff, took hold of the oars and helped their rescuers to row back against the strong current to the landing, where they thanked them, and with their assistance righted the boat and continued their journey to this city.

The story the Japs told was that they were fishing in the vicinity of the Mission bridge about dusk, when suddenly as they put up their skiff, a squall caught them broadside and upset their boat. They were both pretty good swimmers, and in spite of the swiftness of the current, they succeeded in assisting each other on to the bottom of the upturned boat. By this time they had drifted for a considerable distance, and although they yelled and waved their hands, they were not heard by their friends on shore, and the swift current carried them away into the night. The darkness settled down upon them, and sometimes the boat drifted so close to the bank that they could almost reach it. But their hands and feet were so numb that they dare not release their hold upon the keel of the boat, to which they clung for dear life with a persistence worthy of the race which made the Russian bear turn tail and run. The surprising part of the story is that after fourteen hours' exposure to the bitter cold the two Japanese should be able to help themselves and their rescuers. They vanished on leaving Mill side and did not even leave their cards, so that the names of the little brown heroes cannot be handed down to posterity.

Engaged to Prepare the Test Cases Against Colonial Fishermen on American Vessels.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Nov. 3.—In order to avoid the possibility of any legal defect or technicality violating the proposed test which the Newfoundland government intends to bring against colonial fishermen employed on board of American herring vessels to determine whether the modus vivendi arranged between the United States and Great Britain is valid or otherwise the government will send competent legal counsel to the west coast to arrange for these prosecutions, to draft the necessary papers and to oversee the enforcement of the law. It is the purpose of the government to carry these cases to the privy council if necessary arises.

STR. TURRET BELL IS IN A DANGEROUS POSITION

Crew Cannot be Landed Owing to Heavy Seas—A Wrecking Plant Being Brought From Halifax.

CHARLOTTETOWN, P. E. I., Nov. 3.—The storm still rages at Cable Head and the heavy seas prevent the landing of the crew of the steamer Turret Bell, or the boarding of the vessel from the shore. The captain sent ashore a message in a bottle asking that the Inverness Coal Co. and her owners, McKenna & Mann, be advised of the occurrence and that assistance be immediately sent. He did not report any casualty among the crew. Lloyd's agent, F. W. Hyndman, is now on the scene. He has been instructed by the underwriters to look after the vessel. A powerful tug and other wrecking apparatus has been ordered from Halifax, where the steamer will be sent if released. There is little change in her position today. She is still lying on a rocky ledge, about one hundred yards from shore, where she was driven when enroute from Montreal to Port Hastings, C. B.

MCGARRY FAILED TO APPEAR FOR THE FIGHT

BALTIMORE, Nov. 3.—The fifteen-round fight scheduled for last night between Andy McGarry, of New York, and "Duke" Russell, of Philadelphia, did not take place. McGarry forfeited his appearance money because of injuries to his hand in his recent fight with Despie. Though entirely unprepared Kid Sullivan, of Washington, agreed to go on with Russell for twelve rounds. He made a splendid fight but Russell's superior condition told and in the tenth round, about one hundred yards from shore, where she was driven when enroute from Montreal to Port Hastings, C. B.

ST. HELENA UNGUARDED.

Troops All Withdrawn from Napoleon's Island Prison.

JAMESTOWN, Island of St. Helena, Nov. 2.—For the first time in its history since it became a British possession St. Helena today is without a garrison. All the troops have been withdrawn as a measure of economy. The guns and ammunition have been removed, and the island is left defenceless. The outlook for the islanders is dark, as they practically lived off the garrison, and will now have no market for their produce.

A pathetic sight was witnessed yesterday as the chain gang wended their way from the day's work to the jail. It was while the gang, handcuffed to each other and guarded by two officers, were marching up Sydney street that they were joined by two little girls who caught hold of one of the prisoners, Arthur Hoyt, and walked with him to the jail. At the jail door there was a brief halt while Hoyt kissed the two girls who proved to be his daughters and then passed within the stone walls with the other prisoners. Hoyt is serving a six months' sentence for being an inmate in a house of ill fame on Sheffield street. Despite all pleadings and warnings the man had deserted his wife and family for a colored woman's company and both are now serving a long sentence. It is said that some friends of Hoyt are endeavoring to secure his release.

HINDUS ON THE COAST

Unwelcome Immigrants are Sikhs and Former Soldiers

In Some Cases They Have Failed in the Work Given Them, but in Others They Employers Think They Will Do All Right.

VICTORIA, Nov. 2.—Eastern Canada must now be convinced that British Columbia will always have a labor problem on her hands no matter what restrictive measures are adopted. For a quarter of a century it was the Chinese, and now that the Mongolian has been practically excluded through the legislation of the Laurier government, the Hindu has taken his place as the bane of the British Columbia labor guild.

These newcomers are now familiar figures on the streets of the coast cities. They are strapping men of six feet or more, with the straggling black hair of the Asiatic, and when in mufti wearing thin clothes of calico or similar material and turbans. They are all ex-soldiers and occasionally one may be met who persists in wearing his service tunic and medal. The advantage of the Hindu is that he comes to this province at a time when every extra pair of hands which can be set to rough work helps to relieve a perplexing situation. He is not idle, or lazy; some say he is dirty, and it is also alleged that he is diseased.

He does not readily adapt himself to local climate and conditions. A gang of them was taken to Cariboo and used to sit around the camp fire in the evening shivering in their thin native raincoats. In order to save the clothes issued to them by the company in which they were employed they constituted a bridge over a perplexing condition of affairs. One mill manager says that while the energy expended in fighting the Hindu scarcity of labor problem it would be better for all concerned. All who have come are British soldiers, and according to an educated countryman of theirs who has been studying their condition here, they are in India farmers in a small way, earning from $8 to $10 a month. This emigratory bringing them to this country, but that they are attracted here by the stories of high wages.

Although a great deal of opposition to the Hindu has developed in British Columbia, and some employers have declared him to be a failure as a workman, this is by no means the universal experience. Some employers declare them to be fairly satisfactory and enter their opinion that when they have become accustomed to the country they will be a desirable class as unskilled workmen.

At the cement works of the Portland Cement Company at Tod Creek, near Victoria, a large number of unskilled Chinese are employed, and the bulk of these are Chinese, not because they are cheaper for the management think they are not as profitable as white men, but because no considerable number of the latter can be obtained. Even Chinese are now hard to be obtained and it was in order to fill its contracts that the company made a trial of the Sikhs. About thirty of these men are now employed at the works and Secretary Ross states that on the whole they have been satisfactory.

The company put them on a job for which the Chinese had an aversion—the sucking of the cement and piling of sacks on the wharf ready for shipment. It is a dusty job, and as each sack weighs between eighty and ninety pounds it is no light task to pile them head-high. At first the Hindu made very sorry work of the job, the piles being zig-zag, and of varying heights. Now they have it down to a fine art, and do it to perfection.

"How do they compare with Chinese?" Mr. Ross was asked. "They will do more work," he replied. "They are used to being bossed by a white man, and a foreman can hurry them. The Chinaman no man can hurry. He will do so much and no more."

The great difficulty at present, he said, was in keeping them warm. They had not yet adapted themselves to the ways of the country in the matter of underclothes, but this they will learn. The company is putting up a house for their accommodation at Tod Creek. Hitherto they have been living in tents and as they dress in thin prints and similar garments, they have suffered from the cold.
