

SURPRISE SOAP
When visiting CHIPMAN, N. B. Do sure and stay at CHIPMAN HOUSE

Advertising
Discount of 33 1-3 the week or longer if in charge 25 cents

Weights Lots
5 Cash Secures 76 Monthly

to property direct in RNHAM, 96 Prince
& Co.'s Store, East

TO LET.
Newly furnished rooms,
St. East.

WANTED.
ED—Position by licensed
of New York. Private car. experience. Good refer-apply 42 Mill street.

ED—Experienced male clerical store. Apply with references. Address X. Y. Z. care of office.
O'Leary & Montgomery, Ltd.,
16, N. B.

FARM WANTED. 200 acres within 30 miles of St. John.
Best price and description.
"Farm" Standard office.

ED—A bright and capable man for city safekeeping. Salary mission. Reference required.
Box 2 care of Standard office.

ED—A young man sober and capable for city delivery team and for right man. Reference Address X. Y. Z. care
of office.

ED—A 12 or 14 inch screw machine, hollow spindle with complete, inoperative Garage, Pa-sada.

ED—Male Clerk, with exper-general store. Apply Jones pohauki.

UNFURNISHED FLAT
D, about four rooms, central preferred, no family. Box office, St. John, N. B.

ED—To purchase a low-price
in St. John County. Apply Box Standard Office.

SEED PORK (fatted). Butter
fresh Eggs. Prompt returns.
Pupkins, Pork Packers, St. John,
N. B.

you like to know how to mar-service at the highest posible? Write for free details, Publishing Co., Box 151, St.
John, N. B.

FOR SALE.
SALE—A good revolver, Am-bullet, to be sold cheap. Apply King St. East.

SALE—Stamps for sale, pack-mixed stamps, 10c, 15c, and write to Box 3 care Standard Office.

FOR SALE.
K. W. 110 Voigt 1200 R. P. M.
and Hand Direct. Current Speaker Wheeler Dynamo.
(in Good Running Order).
S. STEPHENSON & CO.

HOTELS.
When visiting CHIPMAN, N. B. Do sure and stay at CHIPMAN HOUSE

CLIFTON HOUSE.
M. E. GREEN, Proprietor.
Corner Germain and Princess streets,
ST. JOHN, N. B.

PRINCE WILLIAM HOTEL.
Overlooking the Harbor and Bay of Fundy. Opposite Boston and Digby Boat Piers. House furnished in refined taste. Excellent table.

QUEEN HOTEL
Mrs. M. Hatfield, Proprietress
PRINCESS STREET,
ST. JOHN, N. B.
$2.00 and $2.50 a DAY.

ROYAL HOTEL
King Street,
St. John's Landing Hotel.
RAYMOND & DOHERTY CO., LTD.,
T. B. Reynolds, Manager.

HOTEL DUFFERIN
ST. JOHN, N. B.
FOSTER, GATES & CO.,
F. C. GATES, Manager.

VICTORIA HOTEL
Better Now Than Ever.
37 King Street, St. John, N. B.
ST. JOHN HOTEL CO., LTD.,
Proprietors.
A. M. PHILLIPS, Manager.

WINES AND LIQUORS.
RICHARD SULLIVAN & CO.
Established 1878.
Wholesale Wine and Spirit Merchants, Agents for MACKAY'S WHITE HORSE SCOTCH
SCOTCH WHISKY,
LAWSON'S LIQUEUR SCOTCH
WHISKY,
SIMPSON'S HOUSE OF LORDS
SCOTCH WHISKY,
KING GEORGE IV. SCOTCH
WHISKY,
AUK'S HEAD BASS ALE,
FAUST MILWAUKEE LAGER BEER,
GEO. SAYER COGNAC BRANDIES,
Bottle stores, 414-416 Dock Street,
KANSAS 428.

WHOLESALE LIQUORS.
William L. Williams, successor to
M. A. FRENCH, Wholesale Wine and Spirit
Merchants, 110 and 112
Prince William Street. Established
1878. Write for family price list.

M. & T. McGUIRE.
Direct Importers and Dealers in all the leading Scotch Whiskies and Liquors; we also carry in stock from the best houses in Canada, very Old Rye, Whisky, Ale, and stout, imported and domestic Cigars.
11 and 15 Water Street.
Telephone 618.

NERVES, ETC., ETC.
ROBERT WILBY, Medical Electrician and Specialist and Masseuse. Treats all nerve diseases, weakness and wasting, neurasthenia, locomotor ataxia, paralysis, sciatica, rheumatism, etc.
etc. Facial bioelectricity of all kinds removed. 27 Colburn Street.

THE UNION FOUNDRY & MACHINE WORKS, LTD.
ENGINEERS AND MACHINISTS.
Iron and Brass Castings.
WEST ST. JOHN. Phone West 15

J. FRED WILLIAMSON
MACHINISTS AND ENGINEER.
Steamboat, Mill and General Repair Work.
INDIAN TOWN, ST. JOHN, N. B.
Phones, M-229; Residence M-1724-11.

WA. CH REPAIRERS.
W. Bailey, the English, American and Swiss watch repairer, 128 Mill street. Work guaranteed.

PATENTS.
"PATENTS and Trade-marks procured, Fotherstonhaugh and Co., Patent Building, St. John."

Musical Instruments Repaired
VIOLINS, MANDOLINS
and all string instruments and Bows repaired.
SYDNEY GIBBS,
81 Sydney Street.

ENGRAVERS.
F. C. WESLEY & CO.
Artists, Engravers and Electroplaters,
60 Water Street, St. John, N. B.
Telephone 952.

WIRING.
WIRING—Plats wired $25.00 up.
Knex Electric Co., 34 Dock street.

WATCHES.
A full line of Bracclet and other jewelry at lowest prices.
ERNEST LAW,
Issuer of Marine Licenses,
5 Colburn Street.

LIFE AND EXPLOITS OF THE "CANADIAN SCOTTISH"

The Men Who Won All Hearts at Valcartier and Proved Themselves Splendid Soldiers When the Test Came.

THEIR LIFE OUTSIDE THE TRENCHES

(Reprinted from the "Aberdeen Free Press" of July 17, 1915.)
It must not be supposed that life in this terrible struggle is all "groatly dark." There is much, if you have the eyes, that compensates for the deadly work in the trenches, much that compensates for weary days of vigil. Of course, we are apt after an engagement when those with whom we have shared the mud and ill, have been cut off in the midst of their days, to rush into print and perhaps exaggerate its magnitude, forgetting altogether the other side. But for the other side—the lighter side—life would be hellish, therefore, if we gave some space to the life of the men outside the trenches. To dwell too much on the pathetic is unhealthy; to fail to record the brighter moments only tends to false impression. It is the intention of this article therefore to give something of an impression of a soldier's life from the point of view of an onlooker in a country at our door, so to speak, and yet as different from our own in national habits and character as it is in language. I am not foolish enough to suppose that this description is only characteristic of the Canadian Scottish. It is the spirit that permeates the whole of the British Expeditionary Force. It is the spirit of cheerfulness and this playing of the game that will bring Germany lower than her knees. There is no truth in the saying that Waterloo was won on the cricket fields of Eton.

We have heard much and read much of life in the trenches. What is life like for the private in the trenches? Let him outside at the outset that the average month is divided as follows:—Six days' work in the firing line, six days' rest, a welcome and much needed rest, they march out they resemble pretty much what a writer of fads once ascribed to a bunch of faded lilies, "not dead but infinitely weary." For the most part three or four farms, as the accommodation for the men, according to the distance of the transport, and the usual comforts of an orderly room, officers' mess, etc. To the uninitiated the word "billet" may sound as if the men were lodged in houses with common beds, clean linen, and all the comforts of ordinary civilised life. Disabuse your mind of that! You have a choice of three resting places. You may find a barn; you may erect your own bivouac or, last and best of all, you may sleep in the open with the heavens as a canopy. Once get accustomed to sleep in the open and you find it hard to sleep after day. You are the sun and the birds, for they give glory to God at an early hour—are disturbing factors. The whole of nature seems to call for activity. But you soon accustom yourself to your sound of reveille. Here you get away from the plague of rats and the fetid atmosphere of crowded barn life. Just days for the heat now is very great—the morning tub is one of our greatest luxuries. You must remember in the trenches you never take an opportunity for shaving. You will readily understand therefore what the bathing dip and the general wash means for the men. Then there is the washing of clothes, the darning of socks, and the sewing and mending—for all this must be seen to during relief. You must also guard against vermin. Meals are served just as they are served in camp, only you can add many little extras and delicacies. Eggs are plentiful, although expensive, and all you gratulate yourself with the lady of the farm kitchen she will give you every facility for cooking. I have invariably found them helpful and kind. May I say one word here on some of the shoddy we have passed through in France and Belgium. In northern France especially the first duty of the builder seems to be to lay out the "midden" and then erect the dwelling-house and "stead" around it. On one side of the dwelling-house will be found the stable or cowshed, on the other the hen-house or pigsty. At first it comes to you as something of a shock, and you are forced to the conclusion that to judge from the stench they must be immune from disease. Many of the houses are clean and neat, while others are quite particular place where you were afraid almost to boil an egg. But all are kindly disposed and full of the milk of human kindness.

Let me give this instance. I was stationed at once place in Flanders, and, as usual, and it promised me rain for the night. Where to find a shelter was a puzzle, for there was no barn or outhouse near. But an old couple who looked after my cooking would insist that I should sleep under the shovels of their roof. It turned out that I was to sleep in a spare bed at the foot of theirs, for there were only two rooms—a kitchen and a bedroom. The situation was more than embarrassing, but nothing short of obedience would satisfy. Whether it was the stifling atmosphere or the strange feeling of rest on a mattress or whether it was the nocturnal disturbance—for the old man snored loudly—I don't know, but I never slept a wink. I was never so thankful to see the day break. I got up quietly, lit a pipe, and watched the sun rise, meditating the while on the kaleidoscopic nature of things human.

Here they look on things from quite a different standard than that of the old country. There is nothing of a festivity of loving kindness. I offered them a small consideration for their trouble. But no! "Pourriez vous venir pour sauver notre France, nous ne pouvons pas aller de faire tout autre chose." One thing also will strike the stranger at the rate—the tireless industry of the women. There is nothing of a meditative about them. They are up early and down late. They till the field; they are in every sense of the word workers of wood and drawers of water. You ask the reason, and with a shrug the reply—"Pendant l'honneur est a la guerre, les femmes travaillent aux champs." All are out but, when you ask them, they are difficult in persuading an old lady that if, parted with my kit I might have difficulty in satisfying the post. On the walls of every house and in every room of the house is the image of the Crucified Christ and the Virgin and Child. Almost at every cross road there is a small brick erection known as a chapel. Inside is a miniature altar lit up at night by an array of candles. This is designed for the benefit of wayfarers and pilgrims. The French, in this part at least, are nothing if not devout, and it is a frequent sight to see peasants bow the knee in front of this sacred edifice, paying homage and telling their beads. But these are the homes of those far removed from the ravages of the Germans. A striking contrast presents itself if you chance to pay a visit to some of the battered homes, or what were once homes, around the firing line. Their appearance beggars description. I remember one farm-house close to Ypres where there was all the evidence of hurried flight. The doors were littered with all kinds of debris, broken pictures, underclothing, pots and pans, and lying alongside almost as if in mockery was a smashed image of the "Man of Sorrows." Signs like these bring your heart and bring to remembrance what causes we are fighting for.

But I must get back. If we chance to be billeted within easy reach of a town, a certain percentage per day are granted leave in order to purchase comforts they may stand in need of. You rarely find in villages what you are in search of, unless it be an estaminet. In the villages we have passed through almost every second house is an estaminet, i. e., in plain words a public-house. You wonder how they can possibly exist in times of peace. Here the men congregate for an hour or so of an evening—for they are very human—to discuss over a glass of beer the latest war news or speculate as to the next move, for at present we are a sort of travelling circus. But let there be no searching of hearts! The beer, if it can be called by that name, resembles pretty much what we used to describe in the north of Scotland as "spruce beer" or "penny ale." The wines are of the very lightest—a sort of syrup—and there is not the faintest chance of inebriation. Coffee is always on tap, and for a slight consideration they will cook for you the evening meal. There is no attempt to hamper the men in their enjoyments—in short, everything is done to make the respite comfortable—free as far as possible from the usual irksome concerns of everyday life in camp or the nerve racking work of the trenches. Colonel Leckie is assiduous in this. That the men enjoy the rest is more than obvious. They are ready of resource, and the time flies only too quickly. As I write this they are in the thick of aquatic sports in the canal. Tomorrow, however, to the trenches and the difficult path of sacrifice.

FAMOUS PIANIST STRANGELY MISSING

MR AND MRS LEOPOLD GODOWSKY

Believed to be a victim of aphasia, Leopold Godowsky, the famous Austrian pianist, has disappeared from his home in Avon, N. J. Mrs. Godowsky has asked that a general alarm be sent out for him. Although he had considerable money and jewelry in his possession when he left home, his wife is unwilling to believe him a victim of foul play. Mrs. Godowsky says her husband has been subject to fits of aphasia for a long time. The artist is described as short and of stocky build, clean shaven and about forty-six years of age. Mr. Godowsky is believed by many critics to be second only to Paderewski as a musician.

A sumptuous wedding breakfast was served to the guests, and the happy couple motored to the Boston train for the bride's home in New York. The bride's travelling suit was navy serge, with black and white hat. On their return they will reside in town. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful presents.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. McLean died last week, after a brief illness. The child was named after his father, and was a very healthy baby.

Miss Katie McMurray has returned from a visit to Black River. Mr. Collier, of Highbury, who has been in the employ of the O'Leary & Montgomery Co., here for some time past, has accepted a position as bookkeeper with H. H. Miller, Campbellton.

George Loggie, of Bellingham, Washington is returning to his home here. He is a brother of Messrs. Robert and Francis Loggie of this town, also of Mr. Andrew Loggie of Dalhousie.

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Loggie spent Labor Day with Moncton relatives. Mrs. Arch. McKay has returned from Fredericton, where she spent the past two weeks.

Mrs. Brown, of Boston, and Miss Miller, of Burnt Church, were guests of Mrs. P. H. Loggie during the past week.

Miss Bertie Dempsey is visiting Stonehaven relatives. The young people's "Guild" of Knox church, has resumed its meetings. The first of the series was held on Sunday evening, the 5th inst., and was well attended.

Miss Ella Ellis is visiting friends up north. Aloysius Harriman, of this town, is one of the recently elected councillors for the Parish of Chatham. He was elected by acclamation.

Notice chronicled in one of the local papers the report that Sgt. Robert McNeil, of the 2nd Fusiliers, of St. John, has recently been wounded. Mr. Mander, son was, at one time, a resident of Loggieville. His children are still residing in town. His wife (nee Miss McNeil) is a sister of Mrs. George Jardine.

Oil Baths
If your bicycle has an oil-bath you will occasionally need to renew the oil, as it becomes clogged with dirt after a time.

To clean the bath, first drain off the old oil by turning the machine up and replace it with about a gill of paraffin. Then go for a run on the cycle and afterwards drain off the paraffin, which will have thoroughly cleansed the chain.

Afterwards pour in a fresh supply of lubricating oil.

Perfect baking assured because there are no leaky joints around oven or flues in

McClary's Sask-alta

Range They are made airtight with specially prepared asbestos fibre. See the McClary dealer in your town.

Sumner & Co. Moncton City Agent
J. E. Wilson Ltd. North End Agent
Quinn & Co. Fredericton
R. Chestnut & Sons Enfield
Boyle Bros. Enfield

Labatt's

ALE --- STOUT --- LAGER

PURE --- PALATABLE --- NUTRITIOUS --- BEVERAGES

FOR SALE BY WINE AND SPIRIT MERCHANTS EVERYWHERE

LOCAL OPTION—Residents in the local option districts can legally order from this brewery whatever they require for personal or family use. Write to

JOHN LABATT, LIMITED, LONDON, CANADA

PARTIES IN SCOTT ACT LOCALITIES SUPPLIED FOR PERSONAL USE. WRITE ST. JOHN AGENCY, 20-24 WATER STREET.

Hannah Loggie, died, at the home of her mother, here, during the past year.

Mrs. John Young, who has been visiting friends in town, has returned to her home in Tracadie.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. McDonald and their son, Elliott, also their two little grandchildren, left this morning for Abol, Mass.

Mrs. Jack Jardine, of Napan, is a guest of Mrs. George Jardine.

LOGGIEVILLE

Loggieville, N. B., Sept. 8.—All places of business throughout the town were closed on Labor Day. There being no attractions locally, a large number of the citizens attended the patriotic picnic at Chatham. The weather was ideal for the outing and those attending report a good time. The town was represented in the parade by an original float "H. M. S. Overland," a perfect boat, Claude Brown's car. A number of the Lottie Red Cross ladies assisted in the fitting hall. It is reported that the receipts from all sources amounted to upwards of $2,500.00.

The Loggie-Dickson wedding, which took place at Napan on Thursday of last week, is one in which a large number of the citizens of this town are interested, both bride and groom having been connected with the clerk staff in the A. and R. Loggie Co's store here for a number of years. The ceremony was performed beneath an arch and telling their beads. But these are the homes of those far removed from the ravages of the Germans. A striking contrast presents itself if you chance to pay a visit to some of the battered homes, or what were once homes, around the firing line. Their appearance beggars description. I remember one farm-house close to Ypres where there was all the evidence of hurried flight. The doors were littered with all kinds of debris, broken pictures, underclothing, pots and pans, and lying alongside almost as if in mockery was a smashed image of the "Man of Sorrows." Signs like these bring your heart and bring to remembrance what causes we are fighting for.

But I must get back. If we chance to be billeted within easy reach of a town, a certain percentage per day are granted leave in order to purchase comforts they may stand in need of. You rarely find in villages what you are in search of, unless it be an estaminet. In the villages we have passed through almost every second house is an estaminet, i. e., in plain words a public-house. You wonder how they can possibly exist in times of peace. Here the men congregate for an hour or so of an evening—for they are very human—to discuss over a glass of beer the latest war news or speculate as to the next move, for at present we are a sort of travelling circus. But let there be no searching of hearts! The beer, if it can be called by that name, resembles pretty much what we used to describe in the north of Scotland as "spruce beer" or "penny ale." The wines are of the very lightest—a sort of syrup—and there is not the faintest chance of inebriation. Coffee is always on tap, and for a slight consideration they will cook for you the evening meal. There is no attempt to hamper the men in their enjoyments—in short, everything is done to make the respite comfortable—free as far as possible from the usual irksome concerns of everyday life in camp or the nerve racking work of the trenches. Colonel Leckie is assiduous in this. That the men enjoy the rest is more than obvious. They are ready of resource, and the time flies only too quickly. As I write this they are in the thick of aquatic sports in the canal. Tomorrow, however, to the trenches and the difficult path of sacrifice.

Let me give this instance. I was stationed at once place in Flanders, and, as usual, and it promised me rain for the night. Where to find a shelter was a puzzle, for there was no barn or outhouse near. But an old couple who looked after my cooking would insist that I should sleep under the shovels of their roof. It turned out that I was to sleep in a spare bed at the foot of theirs, for there were only two rooms—a kitchen and a bedroom. The situation was more than embarrassing, but nothing short of obedience would satisfy. Whether it was the stifling atmosphere or the strange feeling of rest on a mattress or whether it was the nocturnal disturbance—for the old man snored loudly—I don't know, but I never slept a wink. I was never so thankful to see the day break. I got up quietly, lit a pipe, and watched the sun rise, meditating the while on the kaleidoscopic nature of things human.

Here they look on things from quite a different standard than that of the old country. There is nothing of a festivity of loving kindness. I offered them a small consideration for their trouble. But no! "Pourriez vous venir pour sauver notre France, nous ne pouvons pas aller de faire tout autre chose." One thing also will strike the stranger at the rate—the tireless industry of the women. There is nothing of a meditative about them. They are up early and down late. They till the field; they are in every sense of the word workers of wood and drawers of water. You ask the reason, and with a shrug the reply—"Pendant l'honneur est a la guerre, les femmes travaillent aux champs." All are out but, when you ask them, they are difficult in persuading an old lady that if, parted with my kit I might have difficulty in satisfying the post. On the walls of every house and in every room of the house is the image of the Crucified Christ and the Virgin and Child. Almost at every cross road there is a small brick erection known as a chapel. Inside is a miniature altar lit up at night by an array of candles. This is designed for the benefit of wayfarers and pilgrims. The French, in this part at least, are nothing if not devout, and it is a frequent sight to see peasants bow the knee in front of this sacred edifice, paying homage and telling their beads. But these are the homes of those far removed from the ravages of the Germans. A striking contrast presents itself if you chance to pay a visit to some of the battered homes, or what were once homes, around the firing line. Their appearance beggars description. I remember one farm-house close to Ypres where there was all the evidence of hurried flight. The doors were littered with all kinds of debris, broken pictures, underclothing, pots and pans, and lying alongside almost as if in mockery was a smashed image of the "Man of Sorrows." Signs like these bring your heart and bring to remembrance what causes we are fighting for.

But I must get back. If we chance to be billeted within easy reach of a town, a certain percentage per day are granted leave in order to purchase comforts they may stand in need of. You rarely find in villages what you are in search of, unless it be an estaminet. In the villages we have passed through almost every second house is an estaminet, i. e., in plain words a public-house. You wonder how they can possibly exist in times of peace. Here the men congregate for an hour or so of an evening—for they are very human—to discuss over a glass of beer the latest war news or speculate as to the next move, for at present we are a sort of travelling circus. But let there be no searching of hearts! The beer, if it can be called by that name, resembles pretty much what we used to describe in the north of Scotland as "spruce beer" or "penny ale." The wines are of the very lightest—a sort of syrup—and there is not the faintest chance of inebriation. Coffee is always on tap, and for a slight consideration they will cook for you the evening meal. There is no attempt to hamper the men in their enjoyments—in short, everything is done to make the respite comfortable—free as far as possible from the usual irksome concerns of everyday life in camp or the nerve racking work of the trenches. Colonel Leckie is assiduous in this. That the men enjoy the rest is more than obvious. They are ready of resource, and the time flies only too quickly. As I write this they are in the thick of aquatic sports in the canal. Tomorrow, however, to the trenches and the difficult path of sacrifice.

Let me give this instance. I was stationed at once place in Flanders, and, as usual, and it promised me rain for the night. Where to find a shelter was a puzzle, for there was no barn or outhouse near. But an old couple who looked after my cooking would insist that I should sleep under the shovels of their roof. It turned out that I was to sleep in a spare bed at the foot of theirs, for there were only two rooms—a kitchen and a bedroom. The situation was more than embarrassing, but nothing short of obedience would satisfy. Whether it was the stifling atmosphere or the strange feeling of rest on a mattress or whether it was the nocturnal disturbance—for the old man snored loudly—I don't know, but I never slept a wink. I was never so thankful to see the day break. I got up quietly, lit a pipe, and watched the sun rise, meditating the while on the kaleidoscopic nature of things human.

Here they look on things from quite a different standard than that of the old country. There is nothing of a festivity of loving kindness. I offered them a small consideration for their trouble. But no! "Pourriez vous venir pour sauver notre France, nous ne pouvons pas aller de faire tout autre chose." One thing also will strike the stranger at the rate—the tireless industry of the women. There is nothing of a meditative about them. They are up early and down late. They till the field; they are in every sense of the word workers of wood and drawers of water. You ask the reason, and with a shrug the reply—"Pendant l'honneur est a la guerre, les femmes travaillent aux champs." All are out but, when you ask them, they are difficult in persuading an old lady that if, parted with my kit I might have difficulty in satisfying the post. On the walls of every house and in every room of the house is the image of the Crucified Christ and the Virgin and Child. Almost at every cross road there is a small brick erection known as a chapel. Inside is a miniature altar lit up at night by an array of candles. This is designed for the benefit of wayfarers and pilgrims. The French, in this part at least, are nothing if not devout, and it is a frequent sight to see peasants bow the knee in front of this sacred edifice, paying homage and telling their beads. But these are the homes of those far removed from the ravages of the Germans. A striking contrast presents itself if you chance to pay a visit to some of the battered homes, or what were once homes, around the firing line. Their appearance beggars description. I remember one farm-house close to Ypres where there was all the evidence of hurried flight. The doors were littered with all kinds of debris, broken pictures, underclothing, pots and pans, and lying alongside almost as if in mockery was a smashed image of the "Man of Sorrows." Signs like these bring your heart and bring to remembrance what causes we are fighting for.

ME CALLUM'S Perfection SCOTCH

proves its claim to quality in the fact that it is heavily advertised. Remember, if an article disappoints you, its maker loses more than you do; you receive less value than you expected, but the article which might have enjoyed your lifelong patronage, has lost its chance forever. We are perfectly willing to accept as final, your verdict on Perfection.

WOMAN REFUSES OPERATION

Tells How She Was Saved by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Logansport, Ind.—"My baby was over a year old and I bloated till I was a burden to myself. I suffered from female trouble so I could not stand on my feet and I felt like millions of needles were pricking me all over. At last my doctor told me that all that would save me was an operation, but this I refused. I told my husband to get me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I would try it before I would submit to any operation. He did so and I improved right along. I am now doing all my work and feeling fine. I hope other suffering women will try your Compound. I will recommend it to all I know."—Mrs. DANIEL D. B. DAVIS, 110 Franklin St., Logansport, Ind.

Since we guarantee that all testimonials which we publish are genuine, it is not fair to suppose that if Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has the virtue to help these women it will help any other woman who is suffering in a like manner.

If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Beware of Imitations—Always Ask for D. & J. McCallum's

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE

Beware of Imitations

Sold on the Merits of Minard's Liniment.

After Vacation Peel Your Discolored Skin

Women returning from the seaside with browned, reddened or freckled complexions will be wise in immediately taking the marocain wash treatment. "Gatherer's Skin" has been found to be the safest, most effective and most economical way to shed the discolored skin with cream. The wash was on before retiring, as you would wish to look better the next morning with warm water. Minute particles gradually showing the healthy, youthful skin beneath. One ounce of marocain wash, obtainable at any drug store, will clean, whiten and soothe the complexion clear, white and healthy. It is also a good skin preservative and prevents the face showing any signs of sunburn or freckles. It is highly advisable to use it before you go to the beach. It is a wash that is highly recommended by the most eminent dermatologists and is the only one that is guaranteed to be effective.

CATARRH and DISCHARGES

Relieved in 24 Hours

SANTAL MIDY

Prepared by Dr. J. B. Rose