Earlier Kindergarten entry studied by school trustees

salaries and supply costs would be covered by provincial grants.

If the board elects to adopt a junior Kindergarten for four year olds the expense may reach almost $1 million with the province taking on 53 per cent of the operating costs. Education director Archie Turner voiced his agreement with provincial statements that day care and pre-school nursery education along with regular Kindergarten classes would soon come under the wing of local boards of education.

"It's certainly not impossible for us to institute the March 31 interim step," Turner told the elected trustees. "The administration of this board is aware of the need and we can do it."

To speed up action in time for the 1972-73 school year the newly-formed ad hoc committee was told to have a recommendation ready by the second board meeting in October.

Trustee David Currey urged that the issue be cleared up long before it can become an issue in the December Peel County Board of Education election.

protest the Morning Dew development at the Ontario Municipal Board. Five days have been reserved for the hearing starting Oct. 17.

Port Credit will be represented at the hearings but its exact stance has not yet been decided. On one hand it has approved the developer's plan of subdivision and on the other it has passed a waterfront development plan.

The development will add another 600 to 700 people to the town's population of 10,000.
