Mrs. Edward H. Landon and her two daughters were killed in Paris, when a shell from a long range German gun struck a church there on Good Friday. Mr. Landon is a retired New York attorney who has been in Paris most of the time since the war started. Mrs. Edward H. Landon was a niece of Levi P. Morton former Vice-President of the United States and once Governor of New York. The Landon family at New York has received a cablegram telling of the deaths of Mrs. Speed and saying Miss Ruth Landon was missing.

THE NEWSPAPER A NECESSITY

The Greensburg, Indiana, Daily News says:—On an appeal, the Conscription Board at Syracuse, N. Y. has ruled that a man employed on a newspaper is connected with "a necessary industrial enterprise," and therefore should be placed in class three.

In this decision the Board took the same view that is at this day and age shared by almost everyone. That the newspaper is an "industrial necessity" is undeniable and the newspaper is also a military necessity. Without it the government would have been forced to spend an immense sum of money, consumed a lot of time and perhaps faced much resistance not now manifested in the making of a great army by the selective draft.

Without the newspapers, the Red Cross, the Y. M. C. A. and the various form of relief would not have been easily or quickly accomplished and the Liberty Loans and the Thrift Stamps might have been sold eventually but not with expediency and perhaps not at all. The public had to be made familiar with the necessities and the demands and without the newspapers this would have been slow—might we not say impossible?

It is not a coincidence that the most enlightened country of the world, the most progressive and the country that has amassed the greatest wealth, in the shortest time, has the most and largest newspapers, with the greatest circulations. It is a plain story of cause and effect.

It is evident, therefore, that the Board was right in its decision that the newspaper was an industrial necessity, but it might have gone further and said that it was a military necessity and necessary to the prosecution of the war and more of a factor than any other agency in speeding up the work of preparing for equipping the country for financing of the great war.

NO INJURY TO ROOTS OF CARBOARD FLOWER POTS BE USED.

To insure an earlier harvest of certain vegetables that are sensitive to frost and cold weather, and which can, therefore, not be planted outdoors much before the middle of May indoor cultivation is frequently resorted to. But this method of starting plants has not been altogether satisfactory. In nine cases out of ten the tender roots are injured sufficiently to retard their growth.

Abroad, where intensive cultivation of the highest order is carried on, the yare now using a receptacle that greatly facilitates the work of transplanting. This is in the form of a flower pot and is made of cardboard. When plants grown in these are ready to be transferred, the container, as it stands, is set out in the ground. The roots of the thriving plants come out thru the perforations and are not hurt by the pasteboard, which rots away soon after the flower-pot is buried.

For the cultivation of draft beans, for example, of which two cross may be had in one season, it is advisable to plant four to five in a container from three to four inches in diameter, distributing them well in the soil! On the other hand, a flowerpot from one and a half to two inches in diameter will do for the pumpkins—two seeds to each pot. If both the seeds germinate the weaker plant should be pulled up, so as to give the other plenty of space to develop into a sturdy vine.

A good plan is to place rows of these containers in boxes, filling the intervening spaces with loose earth. This facilitates removal and insures nourishment to the roots that may find their way out through the openings in the flowerpot before transplanting.
